La Grande Theatres

"Wild Oranges" Abounds with Thrills—At Sherrys Today.

A story abounding in thrills and suspense, and carrying through it a study of fear and its control of the human mind, has been made into a photoplay in "Wild Oranges," which King Vidor filmed for the Goldwyn studios. It is the current attraction at the Sherry theatre.

"Wild Oranges" is one of the most popular works from the pen of America's most celebrated novelist, Joseph Hergesheimer.

Frank Mayo plays admirably the role of John Woolfolk, the man who seeks Virginia Valli, as the beautiful girl who has lived her life in the Georgia swamps, seclusion from the world on his ward. Nigel de Brulier as the aged grandfather who has brought his grandsonpower to the swamps because of his unexplainable fear of humanity, Charles A. Post as the giant Nicholas, the half-wit who lives with the other twin in the swamps, and Ford Sterling as Halvard, Woolfolk's sailor, make up the cast. Only five persons appear in the entire picture.

The photography is exceptional. Most of the scenes were taken in the Georgia swamps, in the exact locations described by Hergesheimer in his novel. One hundred dawn house provides the only interior scenes in the picture.

Comedy showing "Exit Caesar"

Baby Peggy Stars in "The Darling From New York" at Star.

"The Darling of New York," is an original story written especially for Baby Peggy by King Baggot, who directed the picture, and Raymond L. Schrock of the Universal scenario department. It will be shown for the first time locally at the Star theater next Saturday and Sunday.

The tiny scarlet is the center of the entire love interest in the picture. She was only a waif, cast by accident in with a bunch of crooks and gem smugglers. Before she was with them very long they were responding to her every whim, with middle-ears and other toys.

Among the principal players in the cast are Gladys Brockwell, Shelton Lewis, Pat Hartigan, Frank Currier and Max Davidson and others of equal note.

"Anna Christie" Held One of Best Pictures—Playing at Arcade.

Thomas H. Ince recently paid not one hundred thousand dollars for the right to screen "Anna Christie," Eugene O'Neill's stage success, now playing at the Arcade, instead of demonstrating his wisdom, the producer paid it cheerily. The fact that the play had been tried out and had won phenomenal success before New York and London audiences carried conclusive proof that it "had the stuff" that brings box-office lines so that the payment of the huge initial sum for screen rights was considered by the picture impresario as an excellent investment.

"No sum is too big to pay for a big story," declares Ince. "The greatest difficulty encountered today by picture producers is that of finding stories which carry popular appeal."

The tremendous success which has been scored by the new Ince picture carries proof of the soundness of the producer's logic.

Blanche Sweet, George Marion and William Russell are the three featured players who worked under the direction of John Griffith Wray. Their work is declared by critics to equal that of the stars cast of which Marion was one.
