A Democratic Institution

MEN'S STORES are usually classified as popular-priced or exclusive. But THE STORE FOR MEN is not limited by either definition.

It is a big enough institution to be democratic. It is both popular and exclusive in the sense that it carries the widest possible range of worthy merchandise. It covers the field of men's wear completely.

While the standard throughout is one of quality, yet the price range is wide enough to cover every requirement of economy or of luxury. At every price, the value is attractive, because the buying is from the best recognized manufacturers.

LAWN MAINTENANCE

Sowing lawn seed is only a short toward securing a velvety grounds. Its maintenance is even more important for it is a subject demanding constant care and attention. The important items in order are rolling, mowing, weeding, watering, and fertilizing and the first named is the start and also just as the program.

The occasional application of manure to a lawn need interfere in no-way with its enjoyment with the development of modern commercial fertilizers. It is not considered advisable nowadays to spread the rotting of farmyard manure over the lawn which made it an eyesore for half the year and which invariably started a great crop of weeds and often introduced the pest of plantain and clock into the lawn which it took years and more to eradicate.

A mixture of pulverized sheep manure or shredded cow manure with the bulk and are odorless, devoid of weed seed, quickly wash down among the roots of the grass and are not unsightly. Basic slag broadcasted in the fall, a slow working potash fertilizer, is effective. Lime for soils inclined to be acid and as an alternative for commercial fertilizers which applied too steadily are likely to induce an acid condition, and nitrate of soda excitable lightly at intervals or two weeks or more are all excellent to keep the grass growing vigorously.

Special lawn fertilizers are handled by every reputable seed house which can be applied from time to time with assurance that they will give the soil the proper food that it needs. Turf usually needs some renovating in the spring, along with the regular house-cleaning. The quickest way to reseed bad patches is to put in new sod but this usually results in a balmy appearance for some time. New seed is the best and this seed can be sown at any time until hot weather sets in in earnest. White clover is useful for this purpose. As the dead spots probably lack nourishment, fertilizer should be sown liberally with the fresh seed and rolled in. Don't try to do any renovating in the seed line on a windy day. The seed usually flies everywhere except the right spot. Choose a still day.

SERVICE CUT PAST HISTORY

Grande Ronde Meat company, the Union Creamery, the Foley Hotel, the Foldy building and the ice plants of Herman Baesch and the Silver Grill as well as the Blue Mountain Motor company, was changed from three 15 KVA transformers to three 25 KVA transformers.

This work required most of one day and under the old method service would have been discontinued for a long time and business disturbed, but by the new practice the new transformers were moved into place while the old ones were removed, and continuous service was given these customers.

The total weight on the platform during the change was 5000 pounds, which is an argument for alley service as this practice could not be used if service were on main streets with only one transformer on one pole. So smoothly was the change accomplished that the customers did not know when the work was done.

"Campbell said that if Wheeler could get this fixed up in Washington," Glasser testified, "we can afford to cut a lot of money, or something like that."

Glasser added that Wheeler "left us under the impression that he could fix it up in Washington."

NEW PREMIER BRITISH HOPE

Destiny of Labor Party Is Solely on Shoulders of MacDonald, Says Wicks.

BY CARL TURNER

COLD MRUS, O. (INS).—Upon the shoulders of England's "man of the hour"—Premier Ramsay MacDonald—rests the destiny of the British Labor party, which is now having its first taste of directing the policies of the empire.

With these words, Sidney J. Wicks, an editor of the Manchester Guardian, England's leading liberal newspaper, described the prospects for success or failure of the Labor regime in his country which, he said, has so far "made good" with the British people.

Wicks expressed the opinion that should MacDonald, through some unforeseen act of fate, be suddenly removed from the helm of his party, that body would almost immediately crumble in importance and cease to exist as the governing group of the nation.

Premier MacDonald stands aloof from other statesmen of England as a diplomat whose hands are not stained by any secret diplomacy, he said, and the premier embodies the hope of the English people.

Pursuing an extremely cautious and astute course and ignoring the picks of "hot-headed" radicals to interpret power as license, the Labor premier has been steadily gaining the confidence and favor of even the most incredulous, Wicks declared.

Wants Peace.

At present, it was said, MacDonald's paramount hope is for world peace. Realizing that order must be restored among the nations of the world before England is to regain her markets, so vitally needed if she is to steer her industries back to normalcy, the Laborites are exerting every effort to attain that "condition.

While approved by MacDonald in general principle, the league of nations, as formulated at the Versailles peace conference, has many points that are unacceptable to the premier and his party, Wicks said.

Those who foresaw in the advent of the Labor party to control of government a widespread wave of socialism sweeping over the empire have yet to witness such radical changes, and, according to the British journalist, there will never be radicalism under the Labor regime.

No Radicalism.

"Although there may be evolutionary changes toward the nationalization of certain industries, probably starting in the great coal industry, these new ideas will be introduced slowly and will be attended by no disorder or great overturning of the existing government," Wicks predicted.

"Many Socialists are members of the Labor party, to be sure," he added, "but it also is true that there are a great many anti-Socialists within its ranks, and any form of socialism finally incorporated will hardly be recognizable as such."

Germination of the desire for a labor party was attributed to the failure of the church in the early part of the present century to eradicate certain orthodox dogmas. Prior to that time, the editor said, labor was interested only in economic welfare.

"Young intellectuals of that period," he declared, "demanded an acknowledgement of evolution and the practical application of the teachings of Christ. When the church stood reluctant to accede to the two demands the germ of intellectuals sought social reforms in their government.

"In England the social issues about which America is quarreling today — fundamentalism and modernism—have been settled for thirty years. The Church of England has accepted evolution."

Succeeding this intellectual group in the Labor party came the practical body of men of which Ramsay MacDonald was the leader, Wicks said.

Lloyd George, former premier, was characterized as a "man of the crisis," who is through as a governmental leader unless some great national issue arises and he is then swept back into power on a reactionary wave.

GIRL LAWYER TAKES POISON

CHICAGO. (By the Associated Press) — Wanda Elaine Stope, youthful attorney, whose mad infatuation for Y. Kenley Smith, Chicago advertising man, led her to his home where she shot to death an aged caretaker who attempted to protect Mrs. Smith from her wrath, staged the final act of her drama in a Detroit hotel Friday by drinking poison.

Shortly before word of her death was received here, a coroner's jury investigating the death of Henry Manning, caretaker, had decided that the attractive woman lawyer who came to this country a Polish emigrant and became an assistant United States district attorney when scarcely more than 20 years old, had fired the shot that killed Manning "with murderous intent."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

(By La Nita Gaskill)

"Forest Protection Week" is being observed by all English classes. Two-minute talks were given.

* * *

The typing classes have been putting in a great deal of time practicing for speed tests. Several students have won certificates, medals and bars, and a large number are yet expected to show some splendid typist abilities in winning prizes.

* * *

Flavia Ritter, one of the former students of La Grande high school, visited here Tuesday afternoon and met many of her school friends.

* * *

Wednesday, in the fifth period English VIII class a very unusual and amusing performance was offered when a tiny, yellow kitten apparently from nowhere in particular suddenly appeared to give the class a few minutes of fun and laughter.

* * *

Wednesday morning an assembly was called by the president and principal. Mr. Hampton talked to the students and suggested a change in the high school constitution.

* * *

Tryouts will be held soon to determine what students will take part in the shorthand and typing contest at Union May 16. The contest will take place earlier in the day than the Eastern Oregon track meet which is on the same date.

* * *

Student body nominations were again held Thursday for the nomination of next year's officers. Those nominated for president were Ralph Webb, Bernard Hunnicutt, Ted Klein, and Fred Steinbeck. Vice-president: George Gross, Wesley Brownton; Secretary and treasurer: Lillian Sims and Margaret Creasey. Genuine enthusiasm and feeling have been exhibited by all students in this election, and because of the popularity and qualifications of the candidates the votes are expected to be unusually close for presidency.

* * *

Thursday morning in the assembly, Warren Gilbert gave a short synopsis of this week's events, the Athletic Carnival. His vivid and interesting explanations and descriptions made every one extremely curious and eager to see the stunts. All proceeds are to assist in the completion of the Athletic field, and preparations have been made for a large attendance. There are booths or refreshments, lunch, and amusements, and the school rooms are showy in colors.

Friday morning a pep meeting for the Track meet on our field Saturday was called in assembly. The meet has raised the enthusiasm of everyone, and the students are planning to help the boys win.

* * *

Tuesday afternoon at 1:50 an assembly was called to introduce Mr. Irving Vining, secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Vining spoke on "The Chance to Make Good," or educational advantages and the value of considering the future together with the joys of the present. This is one of the splendid talks which the students have had this term.

* * *

Laboratory work in chemistry will close Friday, May 2, after which date the time will be spent in taking inventories and cleaning up. Every chemistry student has been working before and after school in order to get thru in time.

* * *

"Brawn and brains go together."

This was proved at the first mass-of fight, Monday at 12:20. The Seniors after a terribly hard scrap come out with the prize and unless expectations quickly change they will have it when next Monday arrives.

* * *

Monday an assembly was called to hold a regular business meeting. Student body officers were nominated for the next school year, and the track prizes and ribbons were awarded the winners of Friday track meet.
