SEARCH FOR MARTIN IS UNABATED

departed Wednesday after taking air at Chignik under desperate conditions for Dutch Harbor, 468 miles away.

The best hope held was that Major Martin and his mechanician, Sergeant Alva Harvey of Cleburne Texas, had taken refuge in some cove on the desolate, rocky coast of the Alaska peninsula.

The coast guard cutter Algonquin is directing the search. The Algonquin was at the Shumagin islands all last week, awaiting Major Martin's attempt to rejoin his comrades at Dutch Harbor. He was separated from them April 16 when he was forced down at Cape Igvak while they came on here and later went to Dutch Harbor.

The Algonquin has asked all craft in these waters and all canner stations along the coast to search for the missing aviator.

There are numerous sheltered coves between here and the Shumagins despite the general ruggedness of the region and the fact that the ocean beats upon it without resistance from large islands; these harbors are too tiny to appear on any navigation chart. A survey of them would require days and could be prosecuted only by launches and smaller craft.

Perryville, a cannery station about half way to the Shumagins, and Mitrofania, between Perryville and Chignik, are the only spots on the coast of this part of the Alaska peninsula along which the hunt is being pressed where any white man is to be found. At no other place on the coast between here and the Shumagins are there enough even of natives to make a village.

No large vessels can approach the coast except at a few favored spots.

GOLF TOURNEY LISTS GIVEN

The handicap committee of the country club has arranged the handicaps for the day tournament to be held on the course Sunday morning. The committee wishes to announce that the handicaps are arranged as to what they believe the ability of the player to be and in some cases may not be exact, but since very few cards have been turned in this spring, it has been impossible to calculate the handicaps otherwise. They also wish to announce that there may be some players whose handicaps are not given, but if so it is an oversight on the part of the committee, and every one is expected to enter the tournament regardless of whether his handicap is published below or not. Handicaps can be arranged at the first tee Sunday morning.

Players are urged to start as early as possible, and no score will be counted unless certified by at least two other players.

The club has accepted an invitation to enter a tournament at Pendleton on Sunday, the 11th, when Pendleton, The Dalles and La Grande will each enter a 12-man team.

Following are the handicaps, which added to the par of 78 will give the number of shots allowed each player:

of votes for the measure were cast, totalling 50. Sixty-five voted against the measure in that precinct.

Not a single precinct showed more votes for the measure than against it.

According to announcement by city officials today the total number of votes cast yesterday—1040—was slightly below the general average polled at former city elections. Voting yesterday began at 8 o'clock in the morning but until afternoon, very few votes were cast.

testimony from six witnesses who said he sold whiskey. The court added charges of contempt of court.

Previous witnesses have testified that although the sentence to the house of correction was imposed, Grossman was able to forestall actual incarceration and finally was given executive clemency by President Coolidge.

Landis said the contempt of court charge was added because Grossman continued to run his saloon after a restraining order was issued to stop him.

Senator Wheeler cited department of justice representation to President Coolidge that but one witness had testified against him.

HUNT'S LETTER

at the masthead.

Better scuttle the old ship and go down with hands playing than permit it to fall into such hands, George declared.

On this issue, La Follette is ready to give battle.

If there is one thing La Follette has guarded more zealously than his progressive principles, it is his right to wear the label "Republican." He has carefully observed every requirement for party regularity. If any group is masquerading under false colors, he will contend, it is the Old Guard crowd, which he insists has forsaken Republican fundamentals.

If La Follette leads a third party out of the convention at Cleveland, for instance, he will claim — as Roosevelt did in 1912—that his following is the real Republican party and that the party dominating the convention is the wolf in sheep's clothing.

* * *

Beyond the direct series with La Follette and his probable "Progressive Republican" following, Lockwood will give battle to every aspirant for the House or Senate who, as a progressive or otherwise, seeks election on the Republican ticket who does not, in the judgment of Lockwood and his advisers, measure up to their idea of what a Republican should be.

"The time has come," he says "when individuals who have been using the Republican party as a path to power, only to betray it when in office, must cease to be taken for granted. Only by such resistance can the Republican party be saved."

* * *

That Lockwood's decision may help materially in bringing a wide-open split in the party he himself recognizes. But, he says:

"Better an Republican party than one which does not stand for something. Better no party than one which will not fight for its life."

NEW CHURCH IS DESCRIBED

ter, and is a credit to his ability, showing an adaptation to modern day activities in church life, as well as architectural beauty of lines. W. C. Kelly, contractor, was the successful bidder for the job which is now completed to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The new church is built of Spokane brick on a concrete foundation, eighty feet long and forty-two feet wide. In the basement is a fully equipped kitchen, with a restaurant range, and built in cupboards and sinks, service tables and service window opening into a large dining room which can accomodate two hundred around the dining tables which are tastily decorated in warm grey and tomato colors. In addition to the kitchen and dining room, may be found the fuel and motor room, as well as the toilet facilities, in the basement. On the main floor is the large vestibule, leading into the auditorium and community room, as well as into the balcony and basement stairways. The community room on the Washington Avenue side opens into the main auditorium with a rolling door and is used for all activities along church society lines. Off of the community room is a kitchenette for the purpose of serving the smaller gatherings that do not use the main church when needed. A auditorium is seated with oak pews and is offact by the Sunday School rooms which can be opened into the main church when needed. A balcony completes the seating capacity of the auditorium, occupying one end against the choir loft and pulpit platform at the other. A small committee room completes the main floor plan, which room can also be used for the pastor's study. A tower room for boys completes the spacing, being reached by a wall ladder, which also extends to the belfry.

The indirect lighting system affords a soft light and allows the acoustic properties of the church to have freedom of sound. Memorial windows add greatly to the beauty of the church and these windows, installed by Povey Brothers of Portland, are admired by all. They depict the babyhood, the boyhood, the manhood and the saviourhood of the Master on the one side and the parable of the sower on the other. The large windows on Washington avenue was the gift of the congregation to the memory of Dr. A. G. Lane, a former minister, showing the Good Shepherd idea in wonderful manner.

The cost of the new church figures over $30,000, and is entirely underwritten and practically all paid into the treasury. The soliciting of subscriptions was kept within the congregation, although several voluntary gifts were made by friends in the community. The Ladies Aid of the church are preparing to install a pipe organ this fall, while the trustees hope to complete the equipment in all departments of the work as quickly as possible. The building committee consisted of L. B. Moe, chairman; Lynn Bohnenkamp, treasurer; and the minister, the Rev. Wm. Crosby Ross. These men with the architect and contractor had full charge of the building.

LOWER MONEY RATES AHEAD

and the demand for money exceeds the supply, banks are independent and their customers very humble. When, however, business is quiet and the supply of money exceeds the demand from good borrowers, then those same banks themselves become humble. Considering the vast amount of money now in circulation, when the tide finally does turn in favor of the borrower, it will be a flood."

Mr. Babson was asked whether he sees anything which could prevent this cheaper money from materializing.

"The only thing which can possibly make high money rates for the next twelve months," he replied, "is a willingness by Europe to pay very high rates and a willingness by our banks to be tempted by these high rates. This means they would be loaning our money to Europe instead or to our own people. Personally I doubt if the banks will do this to any extent. The bankers of the United States are a fair minded group of men, intensely interested in building up the communities in which they live. They loan money outside only when they cannot safely loan it at home. Moreover, we should not expect any banks to loan money when they cannot safely loan it, because the money really is not their money but rather the money of the people of the community. I am basing my forecast of lower money rates on these four things:

(1) Banks will loan money in order to exist.

(2) Banks will loan money where they can get the best rate with what in their opinion is safety.

(3) Banks will question the safety of most foreign loans until conditions in Europe become more settled. Hence, they will loan their funds at home.

(4) In the meantime the demand for funds at home will slacken owing to a general quietness in business as evidenced by the Babsonchart standing at 5 per cent below normal. To tempt people to borrow under such conditions rates must decline. These declining rates, however, always result in new developments and make for permanent growth and increased prosperity."
