NOMINEE IS PRAISED BY TOM WALSH

"That you are a Wall Street man, in an opprobrious sense, is without doubt, or is the assertion that your nomination is a Wall Street nomination."

"Let the complaint then be withdrawn," he said, "upon the political issues which divide the entire American people. These issues, so far as I can see, are: Economy in government; revision of the tariff; the maintenance in principle of the present income tax law, and frank cooperation with the nations of Europe for the rehabilitation of peace and the revival of industry to create an increased demand for our surplus, mainly of agricultural products."

Senator Walsh said the "head and front" of Mr. Davis' "offending" had been nothing more or less than that since retiring to private life he had been employed, professionally by "capitalistic business interests" whose policy has aroused "public general indignation."

"It is the advancement," he said, "that you have represented them in any capacity, even as legal advisers or in their advocate before the courts. It is not charged that you have been either the defender of or apologist for their misdeeds in public addresses or through the press, or that you have favored or attempted to forward their aims before either legislative assemblies or administrative officers.

"You have been retained, as it is understood, to render such service as a lawyer may legitimately perform.

"A lawyer may honorably defend one accused of murder, or treason, or of defrauding widows and orphans without suspicion of sympathy with such heinous crimes or with violators of the law generally or specifically. How, then, does a lawyer forfeit the regard to which he would otherwise be held by according employment from those whose career or aims is contrary to grounds of public policy or who may have been guilty of even the greatest indiscretions of the law declaring and enforcing the same?

"It is an unjustifiable inference that your views on matters of public concern approximate those of your employers or that called to high public office you would, upon any consideration, accommodate your acts to theirs or grant them aught but justice. You owe them nothing, and even gratitude. You have discharged their service. They paid you. Your powerful efforts every disappointed one with your time as a lawyer was firmly established, until your pronouncement of the law was universally and unanimously recognized. I am sure your gratitude is reserved for those humble friends who took a chance on you when you were a stripling of the law, eager to demonstrate your ability, yet unproved."

Senator Walsh gave Mr. Davis as Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee much credit for the Clayton Act, "sometimes referred to as Labor's Magna Carta."

"A footprint of your congressional career," he continued, "marked by conscientious public service has a peculiar significance at this time when honesty in government remains a place of first importance in the campaign now opening.

"I would draw inferences that under your direction the House of Representatives expunged the infamy of Archbold as a Judge of the Court of Commerce and that on one of the occasions on the part of the House on the trial before the Senate your conduct of a case was marked by distinguished ability."

Vision Unimpaired.

The career of Mr. Davis, the Senator said, had not hampered his vision.

"Your practice has been general," he said, "one day speaking for some great and possibly ruthless corporation, the next for an impoverished contender against the avowed wrath of such or the victim of its ruthlessness; today appearing for interests demanding the process of the law in some instance was tomorrow for organized labor striking for living wages or an individuals charged with helped into in aid of a strike.

"Even more fortunately you were privileged to speak for five years before the Supreme Court of the United States in the capacity of solicitor general for all the people of this mighty nation against the most odious trusts and monopolies, against the pillagers of the public domain and the despicable robber who plies his nefarious trade of deception and fraud through the mails. Your professional engagements peculiarly fit you, they do no more, despite you for confident service as President of the United States. The Anthracite Trust, the Lumber Trust, the Shoe Machinery Trust, the Steel Trust, found you an antagonist worthy of the highest type and they could commend. You fought a good fough a losing fight to uphold the Child Labor Law and a winning one to maintain the Adamson Law."

G. O. P. Record Hit.

Senator Walsh vigorously attacked the record of the Republican administration, and spoke of the "shocking scandals" which had "marked the country." He was especially sharp in his attack on officials connected with the oil leases and charged the administration and the Republican party with indifference toward them, concluding his address with an outline of agricultural and tariff issues, he declared the Democratic party offered a candidate in whom there "will be general pride."
