Visit A Rummage Sale

If you have ever visited a great rummage sale, you've seen a great collection of discarded articles — things you probably think no one could have any use for.

But they sell — and people pay money for these same discarded things.

If there's no charity rummage sale handy, you can do the same thing with a Want Ad—and the cost is practically nothing.

"AN OBSERVER WANT AD WILL DO IT."

Swedish-American Trade Increases on Both Sides

STOCKHOLM, (AP).—American imports to Sweden have increased from about 10 percent of the country's total before the war to 25 percent for 1923. The 1923 imports amounted to 243,700,000 crowns.

Among the largest imports from the United States are automobiles, which last year amounted to about 22,000,000 crowns in value, while petrol and tires imported represented twice that sum.

The Swedish exports to the United States have also increased from about 4 percent of the total Swedish exports in 1913 to 11 percent last year, amounting to 128,000,000 crowns. Paper, the principal item of export to the United States, is now eight times as much as exported in 1913.

The difference between embezzlement and just plain stealing appears to be the amount in sight when the taking takes place.

William Desmond Is Clever Crook in "Breathless Moment"

"When the busy burglar's not engaged in boosting,
Or hatching his felonious little plans,
His capacity for innocent enjoyment
Is just as great as any other man's!"

* * *

This was Sir W. S. Gilbert's way of saying that even a crook may be human under his skin. But Gilbert, famous librettist, did not say it nearly so well as William Desmond does. "The Breathless Moment," the new Universal attraction playing at the Arcade theatre, is Desmond's contribution to the sum total of information on the subject. A graphic, thrilling story of practical reform, it teaches a wonderful lesson, cloaked in pure entertainment much after the fashion of bitter medicine enclosed in a sugar-coated pill.

Desmond, in this play, is really an Americanized Arsene Lupin, master thief, presents a role new to even his varied career before the camera. He portrays an audacious thief who preys on people of wealth much as a modern Robin Hood might do in a dress suit, until he takes over the management of a country grocery store.

Thereby hangs a tale—a tale that makes one of the most gripping, thrilling screen stories of the year. It starts when he rescues the child of his Nemesis, the detective trailing him, from an explosion and fire. The sleuth decides on a course of practical reforms for him rather than prison bars, to show his gratitude. He takes charge of a country store and then finds that the problems of business management, made more interesting, perhaps, by his partner's pretty daughter, are fully as interesting as the problem of reaching the inside of a bank vault without the process of law.

There are many tense moments in the play, which is pure drama every second. The battle of wits with the detective, the thrilling rescue from the explosion, the bank robbery he foils and his struggle with another crook to save the town bank from ruin are all vivid bits of superb acting.

Robert Hill directed the picture and a notable cast supports the star, including Robert Homans, Charlotte Merriam, Albert Hart, Margaret Cullington and others. Several remarkable scenic bits help make the offering interesting, and the explosion that misers in the plot is a striking bit of technical skill in the manufacturing of excitement.

"Shepherd of Hills" To Be at Arcade Theater Tomorrow.

The homely story of "Little Pete," "Old Matt" and "Young Matt," "Sammy Lane" and the gentle Shepherd of the Hills and all the big hearted mountain folks who were so realistically protrayed in Harold Bell Wright's famous novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills," will come to life on the stage of the Arcade theatre next Tuesday. This is the spoken drama, and Mr. Wright's own dramatisation of his widely read book.

A simple love story, typically American, with the scenes laid in the Ozark mountains of Missouri, to which region comes a world-weary man who finds there a deep sorrow left by his long lost son. In his endeavors to atone for his son's sin he becomes the "Shepherd of the Hills," and endeavors to instill love for mankind in the hearts of the rugged mountain folk.

The scenic background for this simple story is the marvelous beauty of the Ozark hills, which have become so popular with the tourist of the Middle West, since the book brought this little known picturesque region into it's own.

The characters of the story are interspersed by a cast that reincarnates on the stage the sturdy mountaineers, rather than modifying the principles to up-to-date standards. The production is carried complete, and an evening's entertainment of exceptional interest is promised for the Wright book lovers.

"One Night in Rome" At Sherrys Is Delightful Picture.

"One Night in Rome," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen version of J. Hartley Manners' stage success which was shown at the Sherry theatre last night for the first time, is a personal victory for Lauretta Taylor.

Miss Taylor, called by Sarah Bernhardt "America's foremost actress," established an immediate following with the appearance of her first two screen ventures, "Peg O' My Heart" and "Happiness," both delightful comedy-dramas. In "One Night in Rome," which, like the two former pictures is the screen version of one of her stage successes, she has essayed successfully a vivid dramatic role. She gives the part of Madame L'Englon warmth and color that makes it one of the most convincing performances seen here this year.

The clear cut, fast moving story is a credit to the director, Clarence Badger, who has solved the problem of telling a mystery romance with pleasing simplicity, yet including touches that give the story character and remove the possibility of its being labeled "just another picture." The difficult task of unfolding the mains plot has been handled admirably.

The splendid acting of Tom Moore as the hero is second only to that of Miss Taylor herself, although the other members of the unusually strong cast deserve much praise. Among those whose work stands out are Alan Hale, Miss du Pont, Warner Oland, William Humphrey, Edna Tichenor and Joseph Dowling.

More artistic and accurate settings and more beautiful photography have not been seen here this season.

"One Night in Rome," as a stage play, was written by J. Hartley Manners; he also made the film adaptation.

Comedy, "Dizzy Daisy."
