La Grande Theatres

Laura La Plante Large Cast Aids In First Picture.

A strong cast of well-known screen players support Laura La Plante, newest Universal star, in her first picture, "Excitement," which comes to the Arcade theatre Wednesday.

Edward Hearn plays the male lead. He had an important role in the screen adaptation of Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Flirt," Margaret Cullington, eccentric comedienne, known for years to the legitimate stage, and in recent years for her screen work; George Fisher of "Fires at Youth;" William Welsh, the father in "Over the Hill;" Fay Tincher, the Min of the "Andy Gump" comedies; Frances Raymond, Rolfe Sedan, Lon Poff, Fred de Silva, Albert Hart and others.

Miss La Plante played charmingly opposite Reginald Denny and Hoot Gibson in many of their big productions. As a result of her work, she was cast to star in "Excitement," a farce comedy thriller.

Immediately after the picture was viewed by President Laemmle her position in stellar roles was assured. New stories were selected, and latest word from Universal City is that Miss La Plante will head a strong cast in "The Dangerous Blonde," and following that, "Relativity."

Novel Role for Cowboy Provided In "Fighting Fury."

"Fighting Fury," the Universal production coming to the Star theatre Wednesday and Thursday will present Jack Hoxie in the strangest starring role of his career. A figure unique in all fiction, the character he portrays is a grim, unsmiling one, yet a man as human as any other. A mystery character in an story that is mystery and thrills from start to finish.

A year ago Hoxie started making pictures for the Universal Pictures corporation, equipped by a life spent on the western ranges and all the knowledge that one man could have of the atmosphere he was portraying. Tall, athletic and handsome, the "western giant" has become a favorite figure on the screen and his pictures are looked forward to eagerly by a large class of fans.

Nine out ten of his roles, however, have been western heroes of the old West. But in "Fighting Fury" as a surprise to his fans, Hoxie appears in the role of a man with none of the characteristics of the average westerner, except his ability to ride and shoot. He is half American, half Spanish, and carries in his heart the intention to kill three men, outlaws of the Mexican-American border, who were responsible for the death of his parents twenty-five years before. How he carries these plans out, with justification in each instance, makes a story with unusual elements.

Only a star well established in popularity can afford to so vary the character he usually presents. And yet, in spite of the strangeness of it, the new Hoxie role will show him riding his best, fighting his best and looking even handsomer than usual in the clothes of a young Spanish Don.

"Damaged Hearts" At Sherrys Has Distinguished Cast.

"Damaged Hearts" is an adaptation from a novel by Basil King the famous author. It is an intense love story, with the scene laid in the Florida Everglades.

The story was produced and directed by T. Hayes Hunter, who found a niche in the Hall of Fame with his beautiful production of "Earthbound," made some years ago.

The tale concerns a boy who promises his mother on her death bed that he will never forsake his little sister. A wealthy woman adopts the girl, but will not permit the boy David to see his sister because his manners are crude. The boy comes embittered and swears vengeance. He goes to live with a poor woman of the colony and twenty years later, we find him a bitter, cruel outlaw. Due to neglect, his little sister has died.

Hugh Winfield, a nephew of the woman who adopted David's sister, has married a charming girl, but there is little sympathy between husband and wife. They quarrel at a party, and Hugh orders Elwina to leave with him. They are held up by a masked bandit—who is none other than David—on the homeward route, and when David learns that Hugh Winfield is the man who is indirectly responsible for his sister's death, he threatens to kill Winfield unless he turns Elwina over to him. Winfield is a great coward and leaves Elwina with David.

What happens to the beautiful girl when she is left alone with this great brute of a man? Does he kill her? Does he merely frighten her? Or does he make her love him?

The climax of this story is thrilling and unusual to the nth degree, and it would be a pity to divulge it here.

The cast of "Damaged Hearts" is a distinguished one, and embraces such well known players as Mary Carr, Jerry Devine, Helen Rowland, Tyrone Power, Jean Armour, Thomas Gillen, Edmund Breese, Effie Shannan, Rolinda Bainbridge, Eugene Strong, Florence Billings, Sara Mullen, Charles Deforrest and Brian Danlevy.

Comedy, "Keep Moving."

"Shepherd of Hills" At Arcade Theater Tonight.

The Arcade tonight will offer a dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's widely read story of the west, "The Shepherd of the Hills" featuring the peculiar comedian W. R. Patton in the character of Preachin' Bill.

This particular play has a distinct appeal to those who have read the book, inasmuch as it is a reincarnation on the stage of the lovable characters that the famous author created in his literary gem. "Preachin' Bill" that quaint old mountaineer philosopher; "Sammy Lane," the lady love of the entire community; "Wash Gibbs," the moonshine villain; Ollie Stewart and the wealthy heir; "Young Matt," the Herculean lover of Sammy Lane; Howard the artist, the wayward son of the city minister; the Shepherd, who wishes to atone for the sins of his boy; the girl at the spring, the object of the city man's evil — these and all the other principal characters of the book, including "Little Pete," "Old Matt" and Aunt Mollie are brought to life on the stage in this revival of the world's most popular novel.

W. T. Gaskell, who for years has been associated with the Wright pictures and plays, is directing the present tour of "The Shepherd of the Hills," promises a cast of unusual talent, that lives, rather than acts the various roles.
