WHAT EXALTS A NATION?—Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people. Proverbs 14:34.

Luxuries are still so high that many people have to do without the bare necessities.

The feat of sending photos by radio may be a triumph for science but so far it looks like a defeat for art.

The view of the sociologist who contends that a spanking is less harmful to a child than a scolding will not be endorsed by those of the spanking age.

Necessity is the mother of invention but it isn't quite fair to blame her for all of the tax inventions with which we are forced to grapple these days.

It might be said that the Kentucky banker, who is alleged to have decamped with $45,000 and two women, took with him liabilities as well as assets.

The anthracite coal strike has little terror for the Northwest where wood can almost become the exclusive fuel in an emergency. Just the same, it makes you wonder why you didn't fill the coal bin during the summer.

A UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT'S QUALIFICATIONS

The board of regents of the University of Oregon, in their search for a new president of that institution to succeed the late President Campbell, have stated certain qualifications that should establish an unusual precedent. This was made public in a recent report in the Oregonian, the following quotation giving the view of the regents regarding a successor:

> President Campbell's successor must be a comparatively young man, it was made known, preferably in the late thirties or early forties, the desire of the regents being to engage a man who, like the late President Campbell, will devote a quarter of a century to the upbuilding of Oregon's university.
>
> A commendable record of service during the world war is another qualification that will be sought, according to the spokesman, who is chairman of the board's committee charged with the sifting down of likely candidates. A gallant war record of actual service abroad would be a qualification that would advance the candidate a long way, it was admitted, but in any event worthy service in some capacity during the war will be an essential qualification.
> It was pointed out that while the regents would, of course, require a firm of superior ability as an educator, he must combine with his scholarly attainments a record of good sense in the conduct of business affairs. The administration of the business affairs of the university must be maintained on the same high plane on which it was conducted during the regime of the late president. It was made plain, and any educator who cannot make a satisfactory showing as to his executive ability will receive just scant consideration, regardless of his educational attainments.

Obviously from this statement of qualifications which the new university executive must possess, the Oregon regents are going to have a man that can be an impressive as well as a figurehead, an ideal in practical citizenship as well as an educator, a personal American to whom [illegible] and a leader who will [illegible] university. He: "Say that friend of yours from the West is the greatest soup eater that I ever saw."

She: "How so?"

He: "Well, I've seen soup relished and gurgled, but he's the first one I ever heard yodle it."
