Britons' Refusal to Imigrate Causes Worry For Officials

LONDON (AP) — Emigration from England and Scotland to parts of the world is now this half as great as before the war despite the fact that the home country is overcrowded and opportunities for workers seem to grow scarcer. Last year despite the growth of unemployment and the encouragement given to emigrants through government financial assistance only 15,842 people left to take up residence in the dominions and colonies. In 1913, when no financial help was offered by the state, the number was 213,591.

The natural increase of population in this island averages about twenty persons a hour of twenty-four hours every people marry, procreate and increase unemployment will shortly become more severe.

In 1913, statistics given by the national statistics, when 184,369 people emigrated from this country to Canada and Newfoundland, last year the total was only 47,116. For the same years the number going to Australia decreased from 64,000 to 20,000, to New Zealand from 12,000 to 4,000 and the other parts of the empire from 2,849 to 2,000. Only South Africa showed an increased immigration, the statistics for the last two are approximate—the emigrants in 1913 and 1925 had been counted.

These facts are causing serious misgivings among many who feel that trade will never have improved to enough to give the men in England and Scotland values than pensions are really worth, in exchange, inadequate as they are, made of the million which are now paid. That emigration would help to really improve conditions is not yet generally recognized. There are many who feel that emigration would be really temporary relief, that in a few years the problem would be as bad as it is now. Meanwhile the country is losing its best blood and the remaining population is growing more inferior.

Many who have studied the problem are convinced that if the government would provide the money for the transportation of the unemployed to new lands, where there is unexploited wealth, where there is room for all the population they can support, and where they would be free from the fear of unemployment, they would be doing the right thing. This is what the dominions want, in their own interest they are about 1,200,000 persons on the dole, marking time with their hands and feet, the state, each week they are without work. The unemployed, it is contended, prefer to stay where they are rather than venture, themselves away from the beach and gamble on a little more entering there is pictures are.

There have been many efforts to organize guides of emigrants from villages and townships, but few have met with success. The people simply aren't hungry. The Morning Post says the most disturbing reflection which this movement suggests is the "decay of the spirit of adventure of our people—and the ability to values of which this spirit actually has been formed and passed."

Ancient Hebrew Play Succeeds in Moscow

MOSCOW, (AP)—Sholem Ansky's drama the dybbuk returns to the world stage and audiences in Moscow Habima theatre, where it is presented in the modern style, but by a special cast of actors in the ancient Hebrew tongue.

This theatre which is partly subsidized by the state has its own building, where performances are given from two to four times a week. During the past two years the Habima troupe have toured Germany, Scandinavia and Bohemia, which, however, proved lean and scholars also, unless to see their art, despite they are unable to understand a single word.

The Habima theatre, which, for the name of "Habimah" has been taken up by the Hebrew's multitude, which and most popular, central theatre, who is to all intents to act the drama. Dybbuk has four acts, twenty scenes—"Habimah" and "Habimah" were performed, and the two plays would be Hebrewly with the exception of the opening scene. The company will leave for London a few days to Hebrew and American.

War Depression and U. S. Films Embarrass Swedish Producer

STOCKHOLM, (AP)—A bitter period of economic depression which followed the World War, and which still prevails in Sweden, and the competition of American films are the chief reasons given which compelled Albert Engel, owner of seven theatres in Stockholm and Gothenburg, to put his affairs in the hands of a receiver, of his creditors.

Engel started in the theatrical business 25 years ago as manager of the Apollo theatre, and gradually increased his holdings until he controlled practically a majority of the theatres in Stockholm. Two years ago, the Gothenburg theatre was added. The affairs, which apparently prospered, suddenly collapsed in the disappearance of numerous films, creating considerable excitement in the theatrical world.

Engel's theatres have been the first to feel the effects of the depression, and the American films are the most popular.
