To Subscribers, Old and New.

In order to put The Weekly Oregonian into the homes of those now without it, the publishers make the liberal offer of fifteen months for $2.00 to all who subscribe prior to January 1, 1892. This offer applies not only to new subscribers but to renewals as well. In addition to this, each new subscriber or old subscriber renewing, is given his choice of either "The American Livestock Manual," or the "Standard American Poultry Book," which will be sent free, postage prepaid. These are valuable works of reference for the farmer.

The Weekly Oregonian is the great weekly of the Northwest. There is no weekly published on the Pacific coast, or anywhere else, that furnishes readers a fuller compendium of all the news of the whole world than does the Weekly Oregonian. No other paper gives such close attention to Pacific coast news, especially as to what is transpiring in the great Northwest.

Aside from its unexcelled news features, a large number of special articles, prepared for its columns by well-known writers, are published during the year. It furnishes descriptive letters from various portions of our own country and from foreign climes, as well as stories, poetry and well selected miscellany. There is a department maintained for the farmer, also for the women and children. All the advantages of a newspaper of the first class are offered by The Weekly Oregonian. No family in the entire Northwest can afford to be without it.

THE SMART GIRL'S LOVER.

He Must Be All That Is Good If He Would Hold His Own.

Oh dear! how pleasant it is on moonshiny evenings to wander forth into the park or to step out on to the veranda for a minute's resting and sighing after the confinement and closeness of overheated parlors! Nobody is there except the man in the moon and one other fellow, and nobody, except these people, can tell exactly what is going on.

Miss Fair Beauty has a score of admirers and she loves to take them out one by one and in the light of the moon listen to their declarations and their objections. She cannot marry them all, and, probably she does not care to marry any of them, but she loves to have them all devoted to her and ready to make attendance upon her every wish and whim.

Small dog from the vicinity of the estate [illegible] have followed her forth into the light of the moon, she will be lucky, whoever it is, the slave of the ring, and whose pods and pleasures and duty it will be, forever more, to cater for her whimsicalities, she or she is to pass further in the name the coming day or [illegible] moon and stars by night. Like the [illegible] of old, Fair Beauty [illegible] to [illegible] admirers, [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and
