HOW DELIVERANCE CAME.

Peace Purchased at the Expense of a Bright Red Jersey.

I was sitting at my desk writing one day, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times, when I was startled by a voice close beside me. Looking up I saw a tall, slim negro girl, wearing a most dilapidated costume of many colors and pieces. Her face was pinched and ashy, her eyes a kind of muddy hazel, the peculiar combination giving her an unusual appearance.

"Got any ole clo's yer wanter trade?" she inquired, abruptly.

"No, I think not," I answered, glancing at the baskets of berries which hung on her arms.

"Better git somer dese hero berries; dey's mighty nice. I'll take mos' any thing for 'em. Gimme some ole med'cine ef you got any. Some uv us is purty nigh always sick."

I shuddered to think of the consequences that might result from my venture in a second-hand drug establishment, but began to contemplate my stock of old clothes, as she seemed so determined to "trade." It was an evil hour, indeed, that led me to begin a series of "trading," that grew with the weeks and strengthened with the months until years even had passed over my benighted head. Scarcely a fortnight passed after I first made her acquaintance that I did not have a visit from my ubiquitous berry woman. She brought berries and fruit in their season, and nuts and chickens in their season; in fact, she claimed all seasons for her own.

When I had begun to despair of ever ridding myself of my "old man of the sea," when I saw a long vista of years stretching out before me in which I must be trading and giving in trade, happily we moved to a distant street.

I enjoyed a respite of two months in my new home unmolested by the trading Josephine.

At last, one day in early fall, she reappeared upon the scene with renewed vigor, bringing a basket of nuts and one chicken. I was compelled to sacrifice a plate of "victuals" and an old hat on the altar of hospitality and the above-mentioned articles.

During my search for the hat Josephine spied, hanging in my closet, a very pretty red Jersey, which a few stitches might render very useful, and immediately began to devise ways and means to possess herself of it.

I at first told her I didn't want to dispose of it, but, suddenly, with the inspiration of a providential interference, I conceived a plan of deliverance. With a sigh for my dear departing jersey, but a bright hope for the future, I took the jacket down and gave it to her, saying:

"Here, Josephine, you may take it, and next week bring me two chickens for it."

"Yessum," she responded, eagerly. "I'll fetch you dem chickens er Chuseday, sho. You kin 'pen' upon gittin' 'em. I ain' tole yer no lie yit, an' I ain' goin' to tell yer none now."

She departed, to leave me in peace, for five years have passed since, and to this day I have not seen her or "dem chickens" either.

Volume of Niagara Falls.

The amount of water passing over Niagara falls varies with the height of the river. Prof. W. D. Gunning estimates the average amount at 18,000,000 cubic feet per minute. Allowing 62½ pounds to the cubic foot this would give a total of 562,500 tons per minute, or 25,312,500 tons in 45 minutes, of which somewhat more than two-thirds passes over the Horseshoe falls. Other estimates place the total amount passing over both falls as high as 100,000,000 tons per hour.

They Were Taught to Be Polite and Treated Every Body Respectfully.

Children in the South were taught respect for their elders, black or white. Disrespectful language to elderly persons, or, as the negroes said, "sassin' uv old passons," was punished more severely than almost any other juvenile offense. No well-bred child ever failed to say "yes'm," "no, ma'am," or "yes, sir," "no, sir."

I think no Northern custom strikes a Southern-bred person so unpleasantly as the freedom with which the children say "yes," "no" and "what" to their elders—though I know it is quite the custom to ridicule the addition of "sir" or "ma'am" as old-fashioned and rural.

The young children called the older ones "brother" and "sister" as a term of respect. A young lady was always called "miss" by her child acquaintances—"Miss Annie," "Miss Sallie," not "Miss Brown" or "Miss Smith." She was addressed so by her gentlemen friends as well, nothing short of an engagement or the closest intimacy justifying the freedom of calling her by her name.—Home Maker.

How to Preserve Flowers.

Ladies who surround the stems of their corsage bouquets with moistened powdered willow charcoal, which in turn may be wrapped in moss or cotton, will find their flowers remaining fresh long after the departure of all beauty from those of their less thoughtful neighbors. The same substance placed in the bottom of the vase in which flowers are kept will be very useful, provided the stems are cut off with a sharp knife once or twice a day.—Phrenological Journal.

Watches in Card Cases.

Among the latest novelties in the way of card cases is a very dainty little one made of very finely dressed leather. In one corner of the case is set a tiny little watch. The effect of this is very pretty, and, besides this, the combination is a very useful one. Ladies are often put to a great deal of trouble in taking out their watches when on the street. Carrying this little time-piece set in their card case or pocket-book saves them all this trouble, and then, too, when making calls they have a little gentle reminder in their hands that they must not overstay their welcome. Watches set in this way in card cases and pocket-books are much more popular than the bracelet watch attachment. The novelty was imported from Paris, but is now being manufactured very largely in this country. The cost of these card cases and pocket-books is from seven dollars and fifty cents up.—N. Y.
