BATHING SUITS SCORED

Movie Sidelights

(By The Associated Press)

Age and experience are good points in arguments, but youth makes the goal first in motion pictures.

Jesse L. Lasky, production chief for Paramount, dug out the records to substantiate his statement, showing that twelve actresses each under twenty-one years of age had been signed for long term contracts by his company. Seven of these were engaged for starring or leading roles.

The newest acquisitions are Lois Moran, seventeen, and Betty Jewel. Others in the under-twenty-one class incluo Betty Bronson, Mary Brian, Margaret Morris, Clara Bow, Louise Brooks, Charlot Bird, Marion Ivy Harris, Dorothy Nourse, Mona Palma, Thelma Kenvin, Jeanne Morgan, Iris Gray and Thelma Todd.

"The presence of all these young girls" says Jesse, "does not mean, however, that more mature actresses do not have an important place. The screen's most famous actresses, perhaps, are between twenty-five and thirty.

The luxurious carriage in which the late emperor Franz Joseph of Austria was driven when he attended the state functions has been purchased by representatives of Eric Von Stroheim for $10,000 and will assume the role of a movie "prop" in a forthcoming production.

The vehicle was built in 1860, and served the late emperor last when he attended the Eucharistic Congress in Vienna. Shortly after he died it was presented to the state museum where is since has occupied a place of honor.

The Mayfair sophisticates of Michael Arlen's books have been thrown into one general mold, from which Adolphe Menjou emerges with his drooping moustache and expressive smile as an Arlen interpreter. Work has been started on "The Ace of Cads," his first picture from an original story by the European author.

Two motion picture stars soon to make their shadow debuts were recruited from the stage where their progress in reaching the top ran very near parallel.

George Jessel and Eddie Cantor made their debut together in a "kiddie revue." Jessel rose by the vaudeville route. Cantor established himself as the star of "Kid Boots." Both received their picture contracts simultaneously. Cantor for a picture based on the musical piece, and Jessel as star of "Private Izzy Murphy."

Western Dope Ring Supplies Villainy For Hoxie Picture

Jack Pepper, better known as "Don Quickshot," is in love with Tulip Heller, daughter of Jim Heller, a wealthy Texas rancher. Jack sees the girl in the company of a group of men whom he knows to be members of a band engaged in selling dope throughout the country. What effect this had on his love for the girl forms one of the high spots of "Looking for Trouble," Universal-Blue Streak Western, starring Jack Hoxie, that will be screened at the Star theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

This thrilling Western picture plays in different from others of this type in that at no time is there question of a mortgage being due or a ranch to be saved. The story has principally to do with the operations of the dope ring and of its many fights with Pepper. The latter is the character impersonated by Hoxie, who aquits himself in this role with his usual sterling ability. Not only does Jack do some wonderful riding, but he also shows that his long absence from the range has by no means lessened his accuracy in throwing the lariat. It is Pepper's method of rounding up several members of the band and is most effective.

"Looking for Trouble" is full of many interesting and thrilling scenes. There is a carefully concealed mystery running through the picture which is not uncovered until almost the very end.

Hoxie is supported by Marceline Day and an excellent cast.

A comedy will also be shown.

Chicago nurse was fired for kissing a patient instead of not.

Carewe Scores With Brilliant Cast In "Pals First"

When you see "Pals First" which is playing at the Arcade theater today and Tuesday, you will witness one of the most interesting comedy dramas of the season. Edwin Carewe, who directed this First National picture, has made an almost perfect piece of entertainment. His work shows rare artistic restraint coupled with real intelligence. The cast is brilliant.

"Pals First" has to do with the adventures of three tramps who eventually find their place in the world of affairs, leaving the seamy side out for others.

Lloyd Hughes, Alec Francis and George Cooper have been placed as the lucky triumverate, with Dolores del Rio as Jeane, a fair doughter of the South, in love with Lloyd. Edwarde Earle is cast as the villain. All of them give thoroughly convincing performances.

The story of "Pals First," which was adapted from the novel by Francis Perry Elliott, an dthe play by Lee Wilson Dodd, is genuinely satisfying. It gave this writer one of the pleasantest hours he has ever spent in a motion picture theater.

Hughes is cast as "Danny" Rowland, crook and forger; Alec Francis as Dominic Blair, outcast and thief, while George Cooper, as the third pal, essays the role of an Italian count, not only doing so successfully, but carrying off all comedy honors in the piece.

Miss Del Rio, beyond any question, is a "find" worth finding. She is a ravishingly beautiful girl. It will not be long, we venture to state, before she will find her place among the screen's most famous figures.

The cast is brilliant, sets are artistic, photography perfect, sufficient heart interest and drama to carry the story along to a glorious conclusion.

New Davies Film At Sherrys Is Full of Romance

Romantic castles in Europe; devious intrigue in a European court; the romance of royal loves and bartering for kingdoms; these all come to life in the filmization of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, "Beverly of Graustark," presented by Cosmopolitan as Marion Davies' latest starring vehicle, and now playing at Sherrys.

The famous novel is filmed with characters that were hand-picked to follow the spirit of the author's famous tale and thrills, romance comedy, and the piquant tang of modern court intrigue run through it.

Miss Davies plays a dual role, one of the most difficult ever attempted, for, as the heroine, she is required to masquerade as a crown prince and be the central figure in the coronation to save a throne. She played the role with hair cut short like a man's and so thoroughly duplicated male mannerisms that the illusion is positively uncanny.

The production was staged on a lavish scale, with a great throne room scene, some remarkable settings depicting European castles, and other elaborate details. Gorgeous costumes and uniforms lend color in a number of magnificent Parsian creations.

The cast includes many screen notables. Antonio Moreno, plays the leading male role of Danton and Roy D'Arcy, is seen as the sinister Marianx. Creighton Hale Paulette Duval, Albert Gran, Charles Clary, Max Barwyan and others appear in principal parts.

Comedy, showing "Watch Your Pep."
