Rumanian Ruler Nears End; Marie En Route to Him

PARIS, Nov. 26. (AP)—Professor Le Senne, surgeon and cancer specialist of the St. Louis hospital in Paris, left for Bucharest today to examine King Ferdinand. He was summoned by Dr. Roggot, French radiologist.

TIGERS LOSE THANKSGIVING TITLE GAME

on the all-Eastern Oregon mythical.

The game was played on a grassy field that was in good condition except for dampness.

La Grande rooters, flying the home colors, gave the Tigers stimulating support from the moment they jogged into the field until they trotted off for the final showers.

Both grandstands exhibited as admirable sportsmanship, accord, to Principal E. D. Towler.

"I've never seen a finer spirit of sportsmanship anywhere than both Milton-Freewater and La Grande showed at the titular game yesterday," he declared.

Few Penalties

With the exception of two offsides, there were no occasions for penalties. Milford Franks, of Dixie, Wash., was complimented by local fans on his handling of the game. Itoe, of Dayton, Wash., was umpire.

Ragain sprained his ankle in the last half hour of play, and had to be drawn from the field. Baker, whose shoulder has bothered him for several weeks, suffered enough discomfort to make it necessary for him to retire before the game was over.

Coach Is Ill

Coach Ian V. MacKenzie, who left his bed to accompany his squad into the championship fray, did not get up this morning. But to those who called assurance was given that he suffered no bad effects from his outing.

The entire squad of 31 gridders celebrated at a turkey dinner at Pendleton last night on their way back to La Grande. The high school student body was host for the party.

Players and fans, including the weary yell leaders, arrived home last night at about 11 o'clock.

Klamath Indian Shoots Up Town

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Nov. 26. (AP)—Notorious gunmen who performed here in the early days will henceforth take a back seat in range history their places having been usurped by Walter Jones alcoholically inspired Klamath Indian.

Jones used four guns last night to impress a short lived reign of terror upon the town of Fort Klamath, 40 miles north of here, adjoining the Klamath Indian reservation.

Deputy Sheriff Ferguson, stationed in Fort Klamath, walked into the muzzles of Jones' guns after the latter had fired four shots and captured the latter when his high-power rifle jammed.

Grangers Tie Up Traffic During National Meet

Reports reaching East Oregon grange officers give some idea of the size of the organization, when it is learned that the crowd attempting to reach the Strand theater, where the 7th degree was being conferred was so large that traffic was completely tied up in Portland, Me., where the 60th annual session of the national grange is now in session. Twenty traffic officers were required to keep the street open. The degree work was given on Nov. 12, and was conferred on a class of 10,000, and had to be put on in five classes—the first going on at 9:45 in the morning and the last closing after midnight. This is the largest class ever given a degree in the grange and exceeds the number to be given a degree in any other organization. In addition to the number who were given the degrees 500 who had received the work about 30 years ago were special honorary guests.

Saturday, Nov. 13, the third and fourth degrees were exemplified by the Auburn team, the oldest degree team in the United States, organized 30 years ago and demonstrated the work at the national grange some 26 years ago. There are 65 members in the team and carried with them a car of special scenery and effects.

Prominent government and state officials from all over the United States are in attendance. The next national session will be held in Ohio, the strongest grange state in the union, and home of the national master and secretary.

in the upper part of his body. Albert Robinson, his father-in-law, was shot once in the leg, while Milburn Vinson, the other member of the party, was uninjured.

A theory was advanced that the dynamite attack was intended for the home of Charles Birger, gang leader, who lives only a short distance away. The machine gun attack left officials in a deeper quandary, for Hundsacker was not believed to be allied with either of the Southern Illinois gangs.

GUNS BLAZE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 26 (AP)—Two shootings, both attributed to private feuds rather than to a continuation of liquor gang warfare, supposed to have been ended by a recent peace pact, disturbed Chicago's Thanksgiving day tranquility.

The targets in the first exchange of shots were three members of the O'Donnel clan, long prominent as factional leaders in the beer wars on the south side, but the firing was believed to have resulted from a recent pool room fracas, with the beer war angle absent. Three persons were wounded.

Several hours later Sam De Salvo, a grocer, was killed, and another man wounded, probably fatally, when the pair were fired upon by assasins concealed in a doorway. The wounded man, who gave his name as Jimmy De Briscoe, said he did not know the motive of the attack, but the police thought a "black hand" plot was involved.

O'Donnels Wounded

Two of those struck by bullets in the first clash were Thomas and Charles O'Donnel, brothers of Edward, better known as "Spike," former convict who has been for the last few years one of the few who dared to dispute the beer leadership on the South Side with the powerful Saltis-McClellane gang.

The third casualty was Clarence Barrett, believed to have been one of the attacking party, and supposedly wounded when Thomas O'Donnel whose wound was in his wrist, dropped to the ground and fired back with a pistol. Charles O'Donnell's back and legs were sprayed by slugs from a shotgun.

Police arrested Thomas O'Connell, 18, who admitted he drove the machine and sought Fred Biegleneck named by the O'Donnels as the other assailant.
