OUR FRUIT PESTS.

An Interesting Letter on the Subject From a Former New Zealander.

PORTLAND, Or., April 30, 1891.

Mr. J. A. Varney, Horticultural Inspector for Oregon.

DEAR SIR: Reading part of your report in the Evening Telegram of April 29, I was much struck with its usefulness and wish to make a few remarks.

About four years ago I was residing at Nelson, a town in New Zealand, once famous all over the colony for its fine fruit orchards etc., but now or I mean then, sad to relate, all its former pride in that respect has departed. The scale, six various kinds, had destroyed everything and not satisfied with stopping there, began on the hedges of English hawthorn, and even attacking the forest trees, taking the life out of the trees.

Well the government secured the services of a scientist there; have forgot his name, who came down and delivered lectures at Nelson, on the scale, etc., but he told them it was like fastening the stable door when the horse had gone. He gave remedies for the different scale paracites, but he said it was too late for two kinds, they were in the forests already, advised most of them to burn their trees up and replant, and attend to them. The codlin moth they had bad, but that was their easiest difficulty, work of various kinds he said would reduce that to a minimum, mentioned many ways to reduce them, some were bonfires at night, digging around the trees, fowls in orchard, the introduction and preserving of insect devouring birds, sprays, washes and many other plans.

Having a few young trees in the Willamette valley how sad it would be for these pests to destoy everything. So Mr. Inspector go for them that have the scale, red-hot. Show them no mercy. Most of them are ignorant, but knowingly, are far worse than highway robbers. Excuse me saying all this, but there is a bright future for Oregon, everything is in our favor if all put their shoulders to the wheel.

Respectfully yours,
ALFRED WHEETER.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Last evening the young folks whist club met in rendesvous at the residence of Mr. Wm. Michell for the purpose of taking Mrs. Geo. Blakeley captive for an evening in her new home on Third street. With noise and laughter they started out on their campaign, and were met at the corner of Liberty and Third by Mr. Blakeley who assumed the generalship of the company, and marshaled his forces boldly up to the front door of the stronghold and deliberately marched right in, to the complete and overpowering surprise of Mrs. Blakeley. The evening was spent in playing drive whist, Miss Hollister winning the first prize and Miss Meyers the booby.

Ice cream and cake were served at about eleven o'clock and the party broke up within an hour, having had a thoroughly good time.

Those present were Misses Jeanette Williams, Matilda Hollister, Lizzie Fitz Gerald, Minnie Michell, Rose Michell, Virginia Marden, Annette Michell, Ursula Ruch, Louise Ruch, Gertrude Meyers and Messrs. I. N. Campbell, S. G. Campbell, F. Faulkner, G. C. Williams, L. D. Ainsworth, Jos. Fitz Gerald, J. S. Booth, N. C. Wilson, J. F. Hampshire, B. S. Van Gorder and Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Houghton.

The Boats to Be Running.

The river route between Portland and The Dalles is to be reopened on the 11th inst. The steamer Baker will run between the Upper Cascades and The Dalles, connecting with the boat from Portland by the portage railroad at the Cascades. This movement will be hailed with delight by the residents along the middle river, and will also be a convenience to travelers over the Union Pacific, giving them the choice of two routes from The Dalles and Portland. A great many tourists avail themselves of the fine opportunity afforded by the river route to see the magnificent scenery along the river.

Good Horses.

The Grand Ronde Chronicle says that on Monday last D. A. McAlister shipped a car load of horses to City View race course, Portland, consisting of sixteen head, that was in all probability the most valuable car load of horses ever shipped from Grand Ronde valley. He has refused $1550 for one, has also refused $1500 for two others, has been offered $600 each for two others, and would not take less than $300 for the cheapest animal in the lot. The sixteen animals are worth at least $10,000.

Congregational Church.

At the conclusion of the morning service the Lord's supper will be administered.

The subject of the evening discourse will be: "Two sides—or the outward life and the inner."

Sunday school immediately after the morning service. Christian endeavor at 6:30.

The Christian Endeavor social at the Congregational church last night was a pleasant and successful one. The sword drill by sixteen young ladies was the distinctive feature of the evening, while the singing of the Alki club added much to the pleasure of the occasion. Games, in which all the young people participated, was had. The ice cream crop had grown to a sufficient size to be plucked and that delicious fruit was enjoyed by all.
