Reporter Tells Of Remus Going Into A Frenzy

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 1. (AP)—Further testimony detailing outbursts of George Remus which he declared led him to the belief that the former bootleg chief was insane, was related today by John T. Rogers, a reporter for the St. Louis Post Dispatch, in Remus' trial for the murder of his wife Imogene.

Rogers was recalled for re direct examination today at the opening of court.

"During the Jack Daniels trial at Indianapolis when Remus was being held as a witness, Conners and I were with him one night in December when John S. Berger, of Los Angeles, came into the room and said: 'George, your wife and Dodge are now down on the fourth floor having a high ball party'," said Rogers.

Remus leaped from his chair as if he had been shot, shrieked and dashed for the door.

"Remus raved for 10 or 15 minutes. He upbraided us in a high falsetto voice for not permitting him to go and defend his honor.

"He talked wildly, struck at us and then calmed down and became tranquil and apologetic. Then he had a bad attack of nervous prostration."

SALEM, Ore., Dec. 1. (AP)—J. R. Geddes, 77, one of the best known men of the Mill City district, was found dead Wednesday at his home. He was born in Armah, Ireland. In 1882 Geddes became superintendent of an Indian school at Yakima, Wash., and later held similar positions at Pendleton and Warm Springs, Ore. For nine years he served as Polk county school superintendent.
