BUILDING AND LOAN MEMBERS MEET IN SALEM

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 4 (AP)—Public confidence from the ways pointed to the building and loan association of the state was in evidence yesterday the position to which they are entitled, Robert Moody, president of the Home Building and Loan association of Portland, said this afternoon at the annual convention of the Oregon League of Building and Loan Associations and Loan Commissioners.

Moody said that the position of the association in the economic structure of the state, which is entitled to better consideration along the lines of night operation, should be made.

Bill provided for in the legislature, he said, would give the commissioner of building and loan associations the power to supervise and control the affairs of building and loan associations. Moody said it would be similar to the authority now held by the state banking department.

The convention opened Friday morning with presidents of the two local associations of Southern Oregon in charge.

Prisoner Tells of Severe Hazing

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 4 (AP)—Charging that he had been severely beaten, stripped to a point where he was almost unconscious, and then left in the woods, Ed Jones, 22, of Portland, said today he was the victim of a hazing by students of Willamette University.

Jones said he was taken from his home in Portland by a group of students who had written him that he was being pledged to a fraternity. He said he was taken to a point near Salem and there was stripped and beaten with a paddle. He said he was then left in the woods.

Jones said he was able to walk to a farmhouse where he was given clothes and brought to Salem. He said he was taken to a hospital here.

Dr. Carl Gilbert, president of Willamette University, said he had been informed of the affair and was investigating it. He said he was not in a position to make any statement at this time.

AT THE THEATERS

Barthelmess Plays Double Role in Picture

A remarkable and unusual dramatic performance is "The Wheel of Chance," the new First National screen drama showing at the Rex theatre Sunday.

For the second time Lon Barthelmess takes the role of twin boys, in contrast, in the role of Alec "Blue Bonnets" and also in the role of the boy's drunken dad in "The Sinner." This dual role was formerly a feature of Mr. Barthelmess' work in "Tol'able David," "Scarlett Days" and the Dorothy Gish picture, "The Beggar Maid."

Alexander Kirkpatrick plays the villain who is the rival of Jude Daye, who loves Sally Bonnet. Wallace Ross, Miss Lockwood will be remembered for her work in "Unguarded Women" and "Madonna."

Sally Bonnet, one of "Nature's little miracles," the very unsophisticated one of the twins in "The Wheel of Chance" with Mr. Barthelmess in the picture. Chief role for Daye's parents is a drunken mother who plays and sentimental, intoxicated father remarkably well.

Albert and Martha Franklin, another twin team, who go back and forth and the parents of Lon Barthelmess. Jacob Abrams is the production manager and Alexander the director.

In the prologue showing the childhood of the twins, Lon Barthelmess is shown. The real twin boy, Lon Barthelmess, is shown in a half dozen of age. In the first scene, Mr. Barthelmess is seen in the dual role of Blondie and Brunette twin brothers who, as children, are playing in a quiet corner, when a tipsy drunken stranger.

Shirley Mason In "Sally in Our Alley"

There is a little room for real happiness in Sunshine Sally's life in Sally's little tenement. Its inspiration Shirley Mason, whose screen work will be seen in the title role in "Sally in Our Alley," Columbia Pictures sentimental romance, which opens at the Jewel Sunday and Monday.

Miss Mason, who has interpreted characters in her portrayal of roles that call for street wear as well as delicate impersonations, has made a study of character and bases her conception of the results of her study.

In "Sally in Our Alley," there is a sentimental representation of her part. Miss Mason states, "In the beginning when Sally is a tenement orphan, who is adopted by three elderly home-lovers, a bachelor, a spinster and one Hallie. They are her guardians, because—they are responsible in each other. The conditions force their common problem to survive for Sally. Confronted with the pleas of love and existence of the homeless house in one of social convention and outlawry in the slumdom where Sally's parents were slain. There is no happy ending here. The story ends with a cut off all contact.

In the story Miss Mason plays Sally Fairweather, but owing to the absence of the actor who plays opposite to her, who will work with her later.

Frances Dee under Fox contract to direct and exclusive bearing on the manner of Hollywood authorities for her recent efforts to live a conventional change, declares that to get the quality before Director Alfred Santell, Miss Dee and Sheriff Thomas Wolfinger of Multnomah County, and were arrested in case my action.

"The Swell-Head" To Show At Colonial Sunday

An interesting philosopher of human interest and speedy comedy is the picture in "The Swell-Head," the Columbia romance of Kay Aldrich treatments and up-town apartments which opened at the Colonial theatre Sunday.

Though the theme is not stated, the two distinguished actors, in sympathetic treatment, intelligent presentation and very humorous make it a social list of actors here.

A young composer makes is the leading character of the story. While at work one day he accidentally demonstrates his prowess on a bazaar. He is successful as a composer, and he becomes conceited and swell-headed. He falls for the blandishments of a "wise" adventuress, and neglects his pretty sweetheart, his amusement, and his friends. When the inevitable hour comes when the boy is overwhelmed—and the result is what is to be expected. How he awakens to himself and makes down to earth is vividly portrayed and provides some highly dramatic moments as well as a realistic finish.

"The Swell-Head" allows for an abundance of genuine laughs, some pathos, and a tender love interest that adds to the appeal of the story, and it has a richness of action that keeps it moving along at a good pace.

William Fairbrother in the lead role of the boy with her humble friends and her plumber sweetheart—and tries to accomplish her end by pulling Sally's friends in a false light.

Playing opposite Miss Mason in the leading male role of Alexander Aldrich, the plumber, is Richard Arlen, who appears in this production through the courtesy of Paramount Pictures. Louis Alter, E. Francis, William H. Morton, Fred Turner, Rockliffe Williams, Florence Turner and Harry Cooper complete the cast.
