AUBURN, Sept. 16—Auburn school opened Sept. 14 with Mrs. Harriet Ingram as principal. Thirty three pupils responded to roll call in the four upper grades with more to come, as hop picking is not over in some yards.

Mrs. Bonnie L. Grimm in the primary room only had two beginners, but promise of a few more, as a number of new people are moving into the neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Auer and daughter Naomi of Tillamook were guests at the home of their son Oscar Auer on the Fruitland road.

Esther Rehb is visiting her sister Elsie Rehb in Hollister, Calif.

Hop picking was finished Monday in the Illihee hop yard. Roy Hammer is manager.

ing peace than in being president. Before resorting to force there was a kind of general agreement among members of congress to frame some compromise and arbitrate the dangerous dispute.

"The electoral commission bill was then introduced, and after long debate passed both houses of congress. It created a commission composed of senators and representatives and one member of the supreme court. The commission had power to decide all disputed questions. This bill was debated several days in the senate. Conkling of New York spoke all or part of two days in favor of it, and had his desk and the floor around him covered with documents from which he quoted.

"My recollection is that Morton spoke against it. The general impression in and around the senate was that this commission would decide in favor of Tilden. Blaine came into the room where his brother Bob and I worked and talked about it. He seemed to be worried and was in doubt whether he should vote for or against the bill. I do not remember how he voted, but the standpat republicans mostly opposed it.

"Judge David Davis of the supreme court had been agreed upon to represent the supreme court on the commission, which otherwise was equally divided between republicans and democrats. He had democratic leanings and it was about as certain as any future event can be that he would have cast the deciding vote in favor of Tilden."
