ORANGE ELEVEN AFTER COUGARS

Schissler's Team Hopes to Climb Ladder at Expense of W. S. C.

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 31 (AP)—Now that the stage is set in the conference proceedings for series of a 27 to 6 victory over Idaho last September, Coach Paul Schissler's Oregon State college Beavers will attempt to climb the ladder at the expense of Washington State.

The Orangemen clash with the Cougars Saturday at Multnomah stadium, Portland, in what promises to be a real football game. Washington State college leads with a victory will give the Orangemen that ring while a defeat will relegate them to second place.

A victory means more than just that, however, for if the Beavers win they have a chance at the conference championship when they meet Oregon in the crucial game November 16 at Eugene. The Cougar Saturday has so far covered first, and it is not the second thing in the world.

Washington State held California, moving place holders, to a 6 to 6 tie and defeated Washington, Pete Halladay's champions last Whitman last night, 13 to 6 and Lon Stiner, who scored the game for the Orangemen, said the Cougars were rotten with power.

Comparison of weight, gives Washington some a decided advantage. The Cougar line average 192 while the Orange forward wall averages but 170.

AIRSHIP LINES OVER SEAS NEXT

Feats of Dirigibles Spur Capital to Institute Passenger Routes.

NEW YORK (AP) — The plane flying fleet known as dirigibles have boomed the planes of the world's great backers.

So on when both dirigibles and heavier-than-air craft will soon cross the Atlantic and Pacific carrying passengers, mail and freight between the United States, Europe and Asia, is considered as American, British and German capital combine with enthusiasm investors as a whole.

Within a few weeks after the completion of the nine-hundred foot cruise of the Graf Zeppelin, the International Zeppelin Transport company and the Pacific Zeppelin Transport company has been formed in this country.

Gatehouse to London

Plans of the International, backed by the National City Bank, America's largest financial institution, are understood to contemplate a passenger line linking New York and London.

The Pacific corporation, of which the Goodyear Brothers, directors [illegible] other NB York financial interests are the principals, has organized a proposed 20-hour service between California and the Hawaiian Islands. Third line is planned ultimately to extend to the Philippines and Japan.

The announcement of the Pacific corporation is the first definite step toward coupling the United States with the Orient by air.

Establishment of trans-Atlantic service has provoked inquiries from several persons interested in the Graf Zeppelin, explains.

Graf Zeppelin, whose D-24 was the first to cross the Atlantic in ambitious to regain its prestige with its R-100 and R-101. Surpassing the Graf in size, capacity and convenience of appointments for the comfort of passengers, these dirigibles now are being groomed for their flights, one to America and the other to Egypt.

Capt. R. H. Harney of the Airship Guarantee company, builder of the R-100, hopes eventually to have a fleet of six ships on a regular trans-Atlantic schedule. Months ago Harney said he had been assured of sufficient capital.

Still Another

The Zeppelin works in Germany which produced the Graf, Los Angeles and other monarchs of the air is understood to be proceeding with the construction of another that will surpass the Hellship R-100.

American rights of the Zeppelin company are vested in the Goodyear Zeppelin company, which is to construct two dirigibles for the United States navy that will be the largest in existence. At Akron, Ohio, the site for one of them, the ZRS-4, is to be laid soon.

The company also is preparing to undertake mail and passenger transport to Honolulu and South American cities by dirigible. Its dock at Akron, consisting of revolving turntables for mooring, housing and repairs in general for the ships, is to provide a great inland port for dirigibles.

P. W. Chapman, operator of the Pacific Seaplane, is planning experiments the ultimate objective of which is the establishment of trans-continental and trans-Atlantic air service.

The success of the German built Junkers Ju-X airplane in its flight with 143 passengers has given additional confidence to those who believe heavier than air machines will prove more practicable than dirigibles for long flights.

Dorniers are expected to be placed in international service through a company which brings together the General Motors and Fokker corporations.

A ship which Edward R. Armstrong, aeronautical engineer, believes will make trans-Atlantic airplane passenger service feasible in the comparatively near future is the embodiment of a series of experiments in the Atlantic.

The first of these experiments will be attempted 120 miles off New York on the route to Bermuda. Flights are planned for a proposed route between New York and Europe by way of the Azores.

The experiments are coming in hands with simple facilities to carry gift carriers and their passengers. The latter is a fact.
