Leaders Point to Rising Tide Of Solidarity in Christianity; Staying Together 'Essential'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Church leaders of many lands believe world Christianity is tightening its ranks.

Among diverse segments of the faith, they say, there is a rising tide of solidarity.

The churches are finding, says the Rt. Rev. Eivind Berggrav, Bishop of Oslo, Norway, that to "stay together is essential, even if we can't unite and become on institution."

Occasion for the messages is the fifth anniversary of the World Council of Churches, founded Aug. 23, 1948 — five years ago this Sunday.

Since then, said Rev. Akira Ebisawa, general secretary of Japan's National Christian Council, "the ecumenical cooperative movement has moved to the fore in the Christian community.

"There has been a new consciousness of the world mission of the churches."

Through the council, an estimated 175 million Christians in 161 denominations in 48 nations have forged a program of joint endeavor. It includes Anglican, Protestant and Orthodox churches.

"We are in the early stages of another of the great reformations in the life of the church," said Robert S. Bilheimer, secretary for the council's program in North America.

"This is one which takes men back to the biblical principles of the church — its unity and its world mission."

The Very Rev. J. Hutchinson Cockburn, of the Church of Scotland, said in a message from Edinburgh:

"Slowly and tentatively, the churches have come to see what has been often lost sight of in quarrels and competition with one another — that God in Jesus Christ created the church 'one'."

Step by step, during its first five years, the World Council has expanded its program, exploring denominational misunderstandings, guiding mission efforts, supplying relief funds, registering publicly its convictions.

Said Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, United Lutheran president and vice chairman of the U.S. Conference for the World Council:

"The international Christian movement has done more to link men of many nations, reconcile old enemies and lay a solid foundation for peace and brotherhood since World War II than any other force on earth."

The Council has poured out 24,362 tons of clothing and food and $21,011,590 in funds aiding refugees, building emergency churches, restoring villages, replacing libraries and housing the homeless.

And it has developed channels for sounding out the combined views of churches within the United Nations and at high government levels on such issues as religious liberties, human rights and moral justice.
