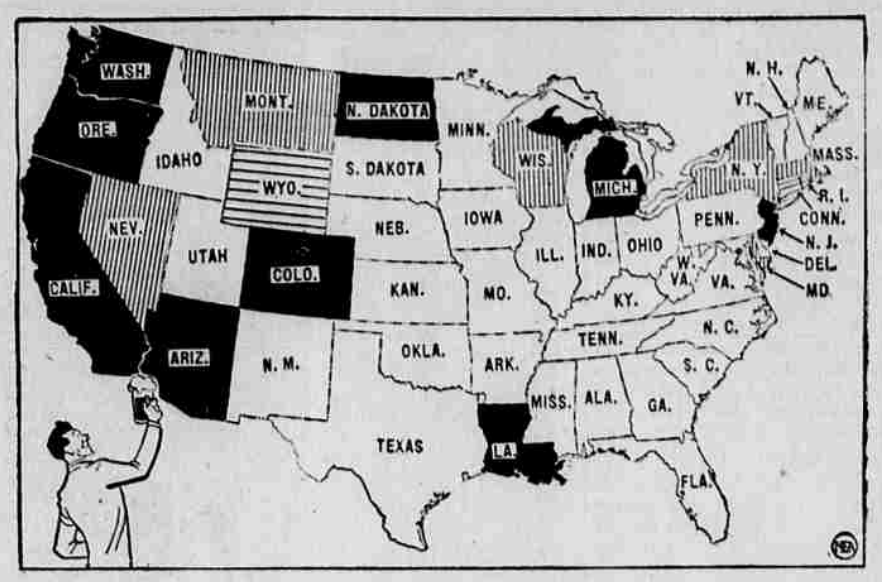
MAP SHOWS NEW TREND FROM DRY BANNER!



The rising tide of wet sentiment, as indicated by the attitudes of the states toward local prohibition law, is illustrated by the above map.

The nine states shown in black are those which in the recent elections repealed their dry laws. The six shaded by vertical lines are states which previously had repealed, except in the case of Maryland, which never has had an enforcement law. The horizontally-lined states, Rhode Island, Wyoming and Connecticut, are those which have passed bills petitioning congress to submit a repeal amendment to the states. Wyoming and Connecticut passed these bills in the last election.

Thus there are seventeen states now officially committed to some form of repeal. Before the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified there were only eighteen states which did not already have state-wide dry laws. Eight of the latter states still retain the enforcement acts which they subsequently passed. On the other hand, Arizona, Colorado, Washington, Michigan, North Dakota, Oregon, Nevada and Montana—which had been in the dry column before 1919—now have reversed their stand.

North Dakota had been dry since it entered the Union in 1889. Arizona's dry law was 18 years old. Colorado had voted for prohibition since 1914. Michigan and Oregon since 1916. Washington, also dry since 1916, repealed its enforcement act and elected a wet in place of Senator Jones, author of the extreme "five-and-ten" law.

New York, in 1923, was the first state to refuse to help enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. Montana and Nevada repealed their dry laws in 1926, Wisconsin in 1929, and Massachusetts in 1930.

REPEAL REJECTED STORY

Against repeal: Democrats 44, republicans 100. Total 144.

Representative Hawley of Oregon voted against the resolution. Representative Martin, democrat, Oregon, was absent due to illness and Representative Butler's name does not appear in the list as voting.

Once the vote was announced, confusion arose in the chamber.

Speaker Garner had difficulty in restoring order.

There was so much confusion that Representative Snell, republican leader, repeated several times a demand for order.

Southern Demos Too

Representative McDuffie, democratic whip, then read a list of members absent, who he said would have voted for the resolution if they had been present.

There were five democrats:

Brand of Georgia, Garrett of Texas, Martin of Oregon, Sanders of Texas and Harnor of West Virginia.

Much of the opposition came from southern democrats who were reelected to the next house.

Representative Michener,, of Michigan, assistant republican leader, asked the speaker if a similar resolution was brought up what his action would be.

Garner said "The chair will decide that when it's brought up.'

For Bourbons Only

He indicated he would leave the matter up to the senate where the Glass amendment providing for repeal, federal protection to the states and outlawing the saloon is pending.

The house adjourned until tomorrow when it will hear the president's annual message.

This was the first vote on prohibition repeal by the house during the 12 years the amendment has been in effect.

Last May 23 it voted 228 to 169 against discharging a committee from considering the Hull-O'Connor bill to legalize and tax beer. This move was made in an effort to get the measure before the house for consideration.

The senate July 16 voted 37 to 21 in favor of considering the Glass resolution to amend the eighteenth amendment.

Speaker Garner left the house chamber to be questioned by newspapermen as to his plans.

"I will oppose any proposal except the democratic repeal resolution," he said.

"I shall not give a vote on any other resolution during this session. Either the house is going to pass the democratic proposition or nothing."

Asked whether he thought the Glass amendment carried out the democratic platform, Garner said "I do not."

EINSTEIN VISA STORY

cinsederably surprised last Saturday when he received a request to appear at the consulate.

Prof. Einstein was visibly nettled because the consular official apparently did not know of his scientific appointments.

"I am not going because I desire to visit somebody but because I have been invited," he said. "Germany is good enough for me if America does not want me."

Frau Einstein who accompanied her husband interposed to suggest that the consul refer to Mr. Hoover or Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett or former Ambassador Jacob Schulman or the California scientists whom her husband has worked.

Then the consul came to the point. "What party do you belong to or sympathize with?" he asked.

The professor, still not comprehending the significance of the proceedings, asked what the consul was driving at.

"You see," said that official, "When persons applying for visas hold certain political beliefs it is difficult, if not impossible to grant the xisa. For instance, are you a communist of an anarchist?"

Prof. Einsteins patience broke, rising abruptly his u'sually genial face stern and his normally melodious voice strident, he cried:

"Whats this, an inquisition? Is this an attempt at chicanery? I don't propose to answer such silly questions.

"I didn't ask to go to America. Your countrymen invited me, yes begged me. If I am to enter your country as a suspect I don't want to go at all. If you don't want to give me a visa please say so, then I'll know where I stand. But don't ask me humiliating questions."

The more Frau Einstein thought about it the more indignant she became, and after she and the professor got home she telephoned the consulate she must know by 11 o'clock tomorro wmorning that the visa has been granted, or she will notify the American scientists who invited her husband to the United States that the engagement is off.
