Lack of Oil Prevents Repair of Roads

On account of the lack of suitable oil that can be used in wet weather, the county court is unable to patch the oiled roads that need repairing, County Commissioner Allen Wheeler said Saturday.

The county has a supply of oil that can be used when the weather and the road surface is dry, and this will be used for repairs of the rain should cease long enough. While there are occasional dry days, such as Thursday and Friday, there have not been enough of them in succession this winter to permit of using this winter to permit using this type of oil on the roads.

Carbon dioxide is used in the explosion-proofing of wings and fuselages. The space surrounding fuel tanks is filled with the gas preventing gasoline vapors from catching fire.
