Trouble Looms in Proposed Swap Between U. S., Latins

By NORMAN CARIGNAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

What started out as a simple plan to swap U.S. surplus military and naval equipment for Latin American arms threatened Latin American countries with being embroiled into a complicated situation affecting American-Russian relations.

Russia's biting references to the plan have in effect lifted the arms exchange program from the limited arena of Inter-American affairs to the world stage.

And as time rolls on without congressional action, the so-called Inter-American Military Cooperation Program" runs into additional difficulties, including apparently growing left-wing opposition and American apprehension over Argentina's armaments plans.

What will happen when Congress takes up the proposal next year is unknown. Army and Navy officials say they will push for quick action, with the state department "going along" with them. The key to the situation, they believe, will be the status of Russian-American relations at that time.

The idea originated quietly enough. The Inter-American Defense Board, with the U.S. participating, decided after two years of work that:

1. Latin America's cooperation during the war could have been greater if it hadn't been stymied by a hodge-podge of old European equipment for which no ammunition or spare parts were available.

2. Latin America should reorganize its staff organization, equipment and training on the U.S. pattern for hemisphere defense purposes.

With this as background, President Truman last summer asked Congress for authority to swap or sell surplus Army and Navy equipment in Latin America.

The Moscow radio reacted bitterly, charging frequently the United States was trying to turn Latin American countries into military vassals. The Soviets also inquired how the United States could square this with its disarmament plan for the rest of the world.

Congress, meanwhile, left the bill behind when it went home for the fall campaigning.

NAMED ON FLAX BOARD

Report to people waiting for telephone service

Pacific Coast's amazing growth makes job bigger than ever

We are adding equipment and installing telephones just as fast as conditions permit . . . at a faster pace this year, in fact, than ever before.

But continuing shortages of equipment and restrictions on building construction have so far made it impossible for us to keep pace with the Pacific Coast's spectacular growth. Though we have already added more than 253,000 new telephones during the first eight months of this year and every bit of our equipment is working to capacity, there is still a big job ahead. You can be sure we are doing everything we can to get your telephone to you as soon as possible.

Thank you for your understanding and patience.

New York Markets

By VICTOR EUBANK

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—(AP)—Selected stocks, including steels, rails, tobaccos and specials, leaned toward recovery in today's market although many leaders continued to give ground.

Early advances running to 3 points or so for "thin" issues were reduced or canceled in the majority of cases near the close and minus marks cropped up in most departments. Transfers held to around 1,000,000 shares.

Timid bidding, brokers said, was based partly on the thought that a technical comeback was not likely. The list had been down on average for four straight sessions.

Bonds were uneven.

Judge Hurd to Attend County Court Meeting

County Judge Clinton Hurd, Commissioners Allan P. Wheeler and W. J. Holland will go to Newport Wednesday to hold a district meeting with county courts of Lane, Lincoln, Linn, Benton and Marion counties.

Purpose of the meeting, Hurd said, is to discuss legislation which could prove beneficial to county governments prior to the state meeting for the same purpose in Portland next month.
