Egg Market Is Weaker; 1-Cent Drop Reported

PORTLAND, Feb. 25 (AP) — Continued weakness of the egg market resulted in quotations 1 cent lower on all grades in the wholesale market today making extras 17 cents a dozen, standards 16 and mediums 15. Trading was fairly active on the decline but continued liberal fresh receipts maintained an easy tone.

Firmness ruled the wholesale butter market with demand especially strong for upper grades for which some dealers were obliged to pay premiums in order to fill orders. Quotations were unchanged.

Market for dressed pork opened 1 to 2 cents weaker at 10 to 11 cents old to producers for fancy stock due to heavy accumulations of supplies. Fat hogs were not in demand. Other dressed meats were steady.

With supplies of heavy hens running below demand, they were quoted up 1 cent to 20 cents a pound.

Conditions in the fresh fruit and vegetable trade were reported by government market news service as follows:

Celery supplies are limited, thereby creating a brisk demand, and some price advances this week. Heart material is now very scarce, and prices to retailers have advanced to $1.75 per dozen.

Receipts of Roseburg cauliflower are increasing daily, with quality generally excellent, and sizes averaging rather large. Jobbers' sales this week are $1.25 per crate of Roseburg 'flower, with California offerings 15-25c cheaper, due to generally fair to ordinary quality.

Apple inquiry is light, although several days of improved export trading were reported last week. Rome Beautys and Delicious were both sold at lower shipping-point prices recently. D'anjou pears advanced at Eastern markets during the past few days however.

No Changes In Price Of Eggs In Local Market

Eggs took another slide downward in Portland today, but they have not changed in La Grande since Saturday. They are lower now than they were at any time during the winter of 1929-30, eggs at this time last year being quoted at prices ranging from 27 to 30 cents in Portland and slightly higher in La Grande. Local prices now are: Ucocos, 20 cents; fresh extras, 19 to 20 cents; mediums, 16 cents; and mixed, 17 cents. The low price of eggs is attributed to the over supply of storage eggs as well as to other possible causes.

While eggs are plentiful and unsteady in price, spring chickens are a great delicacy and a luxury since it is almost impossible to buy them at local meat markets. It will be a month, anyway, before any are shipped in to the market.

STATE GAME CODE PASSED BY SENATORS

was passed on reconsideration following its defeat last week.

The measure had been amended to satisfy Senator Sam Brown and some other members who objected to the absolute protection given beaver in the original bill, and objections made by industrial concerns to restrictions on foreign matter being disposed of in streams were ironed out. The bill was introduced by Senator Miller.

The late afternoon session ended with the passage of a house bill which authorizes the Multnomah county commissioners to levy a tax of one-twentieth of a mill for maintenance of the Portland Art Museum. Eight members voted against the bill. Senator J. E. Bennett made a hard fight against it and had the floor support of Senators Isaac E. Staples and W. E. Burke.

O. K. Reapportionment Study

The senate adopted a senate resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to study the question of reapportionment of legislative representations. President Willard L. Marks appointed Senators Eberhard, Dunne, Carsner, Miller, Billingsley, Booth, Moser, Schulmerich and Upton.

The senate refused to concur in house amendment to the grange district bill and Senators Bailey and Brown were appointed as a committee.

Textbook Bill Signed

The free textbook bill, passed by both houses, was signed by the governor and will become a law 90 days after the adjournment of the Oregon legislature. The act provides that all pupils of public elementary schools in Oregon will be provided with free textbooks. The cost to the state per pupil will not exceed $1.50, the law states, and it is estimated that it will require three years before all books can be supplied the pupils. The original bill provided that high school students would also be provided with free books, but this was eliminated by the education committee before the measure came out onto the floor of the house.

The divided report on the state constabulary bill has not yet been made on the senate floor but it was expected the report would be made today. The revision of laws committee, which has this bill, conferred with the governor, who urged its adoption. He stated that with this police system in effect, not only could money be saved by the state, but that he would be able to parole about 200 prisoners, thus relieving the congested condition in the state penitentiary. He believed the police could take care of the paroled men. The conference, however, failed to change any votes, and four members of the committee expected to sign the majority report recommending the bill not pass while Senator Eddy, who introduced the act, will sign a minority report recommending its adoption.

A new bill providing a method of filling vacancies in the state legislature is expected to come out of the senate committee on elections and privileges as a result of that body referring back the Bennett bill empowering the governor to appoint.

Numerous objections to the bill were made on the floor when it came on for third reading, and Senator Gus C. Moser moved that it be re-referred.

Beaten 16 to 14

Bennett made a floor fight for his bill changing the date of the primary election from May to September on alternate election years, but it was beaten by a vote of 16 to 14. Bennett then changed his vote to no, stating that he would move for reconsideration.

An excise tax of 10 cents a pound on all oleomargarine sold in the state was passed in the house, while the bill prohibiting use of oleomargarine or any butter substitute in state institutions, already passed the senate, was re-crefferd to the committee. The measure establishing grades for cream was passed. This bill now goes to the governor.

The house had passed 141 bills which have not been considered by the senate, while the governor signed 37 of the house measures and 26 others were ready for his signature. Introduction of four more bills brought the total to 401 in the house. The 800-mark is expected to be reached by both houses before sine die adjournment.

Eight dollars instead of $3 a day would be the wages of members of the state legislature under a joint resolution, proposing a constitutional amendment, introduced in the senate by Senators E. W. Miller and W. E. Burke. The measure, however, would limit the total pay to $320.

Debate on the administration bill creating a state police department began in the senate at 10:40 o'clock today when the committee on revision of laws returned a divided report on the measure. Senators Bailey, Franciscovich, Strayer and Hall signed a majority report recommending that the bill not pass, and Senator Eddy, who introduced a bill, signed a minority report recommended that it pass. The debate started on a motion by Eddy that the minority report be substituted for the majority report.

Public hearings are still in order before the Oregon legislature. Tonight, the close of the fifth day over the limited time of the session, will see two hearings, one on the tax question and another on the elections issue. Both will be held before senate committees.

All matters relating to Oregon's intangibles taxes, past, present and future, will be discussed at one hearing.

The other hearing will be on the election bill, introduced by the senate committee on elections and privileges, which provides for changes in the election method, nomination of officers, registration and corrupt practices acts.
