Church Group Lists Challenge

BUFFALO, N.Y.—(AP)—A three-point challenge faces all Christians in everyday business and social life, according to a formal report issued by 325 delegates to the North American Lay Conference on the Christian and his Daily Work.

As outlined in the statement at Sunday's closing session, God requires:

"1. That we work in partnership with Him and in accordance with His laws.

"2. That we work unselfishly for the good of our fellow man.

"3. That as members of the church, we search our minds and hearts as we seek to live up to the highest standards which Christ taught us."

Laymen from 34 Protestant church groups in the United States and Canada adopted the brief, 500-word statement after an hour's debate.

Strong Men of Scotland Weep, Wail At News of American Bagpipe Band

LONDON—(AP)—The strong men of Scotland wept and wailed this week — the news was that the U. S. Army has formed a bagpipe band with Yankee kilts.

"Och, mon, but it canna be true," was the reaction at the incredible news. "Perhaps the Americans just don't understand," one Scots officer sighed.

London newspapers printed the news in outraged headlines.

Snarled the Sunday Chronicle: "The Pipers Are Coming—And How And How. Yanks' Kilty Band Steals a Tartan."

"GIs Bag the Pipes and a Royal Tartan," growled the Sunday Graphic.

"The Pipers' Lament," mourned the Reynolds News.

The Scots said it wasn't just that the Americans have formed a pipe band, although they shudder at the name, "The Kilty Band." In fact, the Scottish borderers loaned one of their pipers as an instructor to the U. S. Army's Second Division band at Fort Lewis, Wash.

The Second Division is now in Korea where, London newspapers said, announcement of forming the kilt band was made.

What pains the Scots is the Yanks' choice of the Royal Stuart tartan as the cloth pattern for their kilts. This particular tartan is reserved to the pipers of five Royal Scottish regiments—only some 200 men in the British army. The British royal family has worn the tartan since the time of the Stuart Kings. And only the reigning monarch as a special honor can confer the right to wear the Stuart tartan on others.

"Perhaps the Americans just don't understand," the Scots sighed.

The Second Division kilty band was formed in 1948 when the outfit was stationed at Fort Lewis.

Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins, then the division commander, bought the pipes with his own funds.

He had become intrigued with the idea of forming such a band after hearing the bagpipes of the Scots Guards in England during World War II as they paraded along the Mall for His Majesty.

In Seattle, John W. Ironside, once sergeant piper of the Second Highland Light Infantry, snorted over the Royal Stuart tartan furore. He said the Second Division bagpipers, whom he trained for six months, picked out the tartan pattern themselves. Then he added approvingly, "It made a nice gaudy show."

Soldier Uses Screw Driver To Fly Plane

TOKYO —(AP)— A soldier who, without experience, used a screw driver to fly a damaged plane home with its wounded pilot, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross Monday.

The award by the Far East Command went to Cpl. James F. King, of Milton, W. Va., for the strange flight near Songju, Korea, Aug. 18, 1950.

The citation said that King, then a Pfc in the First Cavalry Division, was an observer in an unarmed reconnaissance plane when it was badly damaged by ground fire behind enemy lines. The pilot was seriously wounded.

Not knowing how to fly, King replaced the smashed control stick with a small screwdriver and flew the plane back to the division's airstrip, following instructions from the semi-conscious pilot.

The citation, praising King's "rare ingenuity and courage," said his action undoubtedly saved the life of the pilot, whose name was not given.

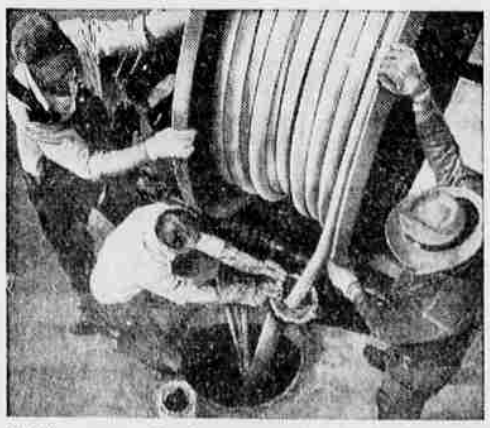
If all the people who worked to get your telephone to you could have called at your home with the installer, you'd have seen something like this.

What it takes to install one new telephone

A big team of telephone people is needed to let you hear that first "hello"

The doorbell's ring announces the telephone installer, telephone in one hand, crisp new directory in the other. He goes to work quickly, and, almost before you know it, you're making that first call. Seems simple, doesn't it? Yet a surprisingly large team of people you'll probably never meet worked hard to make it possible for the installer to mount your steps. And that doesn't even count all the other craftsmen who had a hand in manufacturing the telephone instrument and other equipment needed to carry your calls.



Cable crews, for instance, installed the cable from the central office to your neighborhood. Other telephone people determined the exact pair of wires in that cable which would carry your calls. Still others tested the circuits, or put up poles, or spliced wires . . . or performed any number of other jobs which made that first ring possible.

The man who soldered your wires to the intricate central office frame, the girl who took your order for service—and all telephone people—have as a goal: to get telephones to all who want them. They know their jobs. And they're doing them so well we've been able to double the number of telephones at work in the Pacific West in less than ten years.

Your telephone is one of today's best bargains

Each new telephone we add represents about $430 in equipment—more than double what it was for the prewar period. Our day-to-day operating costs have soared, too. Yet telephone rates have gone up far less than most things you buy.
