Harvest Hands Told of Rights

SALEM — (AP) — Oregon Labor Commissioner W. E. Kimsey advised harvest hands Wednesday to keep a close check on wages due them.

Kimsey said he gets complaints every summer from farm workers who have been cheated out of their wages.

If their wages are not paid, workers can file liens against the grower's crop within 30 days after quitting.

Kimsey said a group of Willamette Valley bean pickers lost several thousand dollars in wages last summer because the grower said he was unable to pay.

Ten Nyssa potato pickers lost $223 last fall because a Colorado labor contractor skipped off with their wages. Kimsey is still looking for him.

Kimsey said he would help any farm worker collect wages due him.
