"JASON LEE SPECIAL" TO COME AUG. 2

This method of providing a food supply was an extravagant one, for there were no modern methods of food preservation and large quantities of meat spoiled or rotted. There was nothing then to do but to shoot more game.

On this trip Jason Lee conducted in Southern Idaho the first formal Protestant religious observance to be held in the vast interior lying west of the Rocky mountains. This was while he was waiting for Captain Wyeth to build Fort Hall, a place which afterward became famous on the Oregon Trail. Lee also drove the first cattle ready to the Pacific coast, but, when he reached Walla Walla, the difficulty of transporting them down the Columbia river was so great that he worked out an exchange with the Hudson's Bay company and left his cattle in Eastern Oregon. Two years after the going of Jason Lee to Oregon, Marcus Whitman took the first wagon over the Rocky mountains.

Lee settled near what is now Salem, Ore., and began his missionary work. He was the first missionary either Catholic or Protestant, to enter the Oregon country.

The modernized covered wagon which is following Jason Lee's trail, carries special speakers of note, and programs including pageantry, addresses and pictures are being presented in more than 100 places between Boston and Salem. An educational young Christian Indian accompanies the wagon in Indian regalia, and an Indian exhibit and demonstration form a part of the program.

The caravan is scheduled to reach Salem on the 8th day of September, where a reception is planned on the state fair grounds.

applications are now awaiting the consideration of this office.

At present applications are being received at this office at the rate of approximately 30 per day and loans are being either closed or rejected at the rate of approximately 30 per day.

secretary and treasurer for each of the three congressional districts.

Immediately the central committee will push the candidacies of the Republican ticket for the state, headed by Joe E. Dunne, nominee for governor, and including secretary of state, three congressional posts and many other offices.

F. S. Gaither of Wallowa nominated Priaulx who, he said, "is imbued with the spirit of youth, knows the needs of this state and nation, has broad mental vision and can comprehend the needs of the future, and who has those qualities that can cement factions and bring harmony."

Ben B. Little, The Dalles publisher, seconded the nomination.

Paper May Bring Her Small Fortune

MELROSE, Mass. (AP)—A yellowed copy of the Declaration of Independence, bearing what is believed the rare signature of Button Gwinnett, fifth signer of the document, may bring Mrs. Laura Whipple Barlow, treasurer, a lot of money.

The document has been in Mrs. Barlow's possession for 20 years but the possibility of its being of great value did not occur to her until the great autograph collectors had paid as high as $22,500 for genuine signatures of Gwinnett.
