Record-Breaking Amount Of Food Is Distributed

Farm News Roundup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department reported today it gave away a record-breaking total of 2,979,000,000 pounds of food in the year ending last June 30.

The foods went to school lunchrooms, charitable institutions, to individual needy people and families, both in the United States and overseas.

Although the amount of food distributed was up 5 per cent from the previous fiscal year there was a decline in dollar value of the gifts from 458 million dollars in fiscal 1958 to 413 million dollars in 1959.

Foods donated by the department came from farm price support programs. Department figures showed the federal food grants were going to as many as 5,750,000 needy persons at some periods in the 1959 fiscal year.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A special Senate committee has announced it will hold a series of 20 public hearings in 17 states to gather testimony on the nation's water resources.

Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D-Okla.), chairman of the group, said the committee is scheduled to report to the Senate late next year on the nation's present and future water needs.

Most of the hearings will be conducted in the West, Kerr said Thursday.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Cotton Council has renewed its plea for stiffer import curbs on cotton textiles. It denied the action would violate any understanding with Japan.

The council made the plea in a statement filed with Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson. It urged him to approve an earlier request for "relief from an increasing influx of cheaply produced foreign cotton products."

MAN SAVES DOG

GARFIELD, N. J (UPI) — Emil Tomko, 21, ran onto railroad tracks Thursday to chase off a dog standing in the path of a freight train. The dog ran off safely but Tomko was hit. He was listed in fair condition at Passaic General Hospital with leg, shoulder and possible internal injuries.

ANNOUNCE ECONOMIC PLANS

CAIRO (UPI) — The United Arab Republic Tuesday announced sweeping economic plans to increase much-needed foreign currency reserves and to strengthen the Egyptian pound abroad.

Radio-Active Crop Planned For Spring

WOOSTER, Ohio (UPI)—Workers here have started building a concrete foot-high border around an acre of farmland which is destined to grow perhaps the world's deadliest crop.

Next spring, agronomists will seed the land with corn, hay, soybeans and possibly wheat, then spray it with a potent solution of water and strontium 85, a radioactive material.

Then the field will receive the normal amounts of fertilizers and attention any farmer in the northern Ohio region would give his crops.

The purpose is to determine the effect of radioactive fallout on crops. The experiment could continue for half a century.

Ohio State University, which operates an agricultural station here, is conducting the research under an $85,000 Atomic Energy Commission grant.

Strontium 85, a material somewhat less dangerous but similar in behavior to strontium 90, the deadly by-product of a nuclear explosion, will be used the first year to cut the risk of contamination as farmhands with PH.D. degrees tend the crops.

Strontium 85 "dies out" in about two years, according to James L. Mortensen, associate professor of agronomy at OSU and one of the scientists conducting the experiment.

Plans call for strontium 90 itself to be sprayed in solution on the 20 plots, each about 1-20th of an acre and each sealed by a concrete wall, the following year. The strontium 90, which will be shipped from the AEC installation at Oak Ridge, Tenn., will still retain half its radioactivity 25 years after it enters the soil.

Geiger counters and other devices will be used to measure the amount of radioactivity absorbed by the grains as they grow in the fields, Mortensen said.

In 1960, the strontium 90 will be sprayed on natural virgin wooded areas near here and in other parts of Ohio to measure its effects on growing trees.

The experiment is the only one in the country to be conducted on farmlands under natural conditions, Mortensen said. Experimenters have conducted similar research in greenhouses, he said.

Grain Harvest Nearing End

Rains throughout southern and eastern portions of the State helped relieve the very dry soil moisture, but also brought short delays in harvesting operations.

Seeding of fall grain was getting a start in the Columbia River Counties of eastern Oregon. Recent rains have penetrated about 2 inches on summer fallow.

Grain harvest was about over at the lower elevations in eastern Oregon, but was continuing at the higher levels after being delayed by wet weather. Per acre yields were generally poor in Lake and Harney Counties. Hot weather during the growing period has caused more than the usual amount of thin barley in Klamath County. Yields and test weights of fall grains were good in most central Oregon areas. In western Oregon grain harvest was in the finishing stages on fall grains and moving rapidly on spring grains.

A few fields of late hay were being baled in western Oregon and some third crop alfalfa remains to be cut. Malheur and Umatilla County producers were cutting third crop alfalfa. Rains delayed haying operations on second cuttingss in Klamath County.

The bentgrass seed harvest was active in western and central Oregon areas. Yields and seed quality were good. Although there has been scattered damage from hail, alfalfa and clover seed crops generally were making normal development in Malheur County. Machine picking of hops was starting in western Oregon. Peppermint harvest was at the mid-point in the Willamette Valley.

Supplement Of The La Grande Observer

Deadline For Soil Bank Signup Is September 10

September 10 is the last day farmers can take the first necessary step to participate in the Soil Bank's 1960 Conservation Reserve program, Ben L. Robinson, Chairman, Union County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee said today. The first step is for each farmer who wishes to offer cropland under the program to ask the County ASC Committee to set a basic annual rate per-acre for the land offered. The period for filing such requests is from August 24 through September 10. The Chairman emphasized that no requests will be accepted after September 10.

After the basic rate has been established for the land offered, the farmer will then have an opportunity to apply for a contract any figure below the basic rate. If the offer can be accepted, the farmer will be notified of the date by which he must return the signed Conservation Reserve contract to the County ASC Office.

Growers who participate in the program receive cost-sharing help in establishing approved conservation practices on the reserved land, and annual rental payments for the life of the contract.

Farmers who would like to have further information about participating in the 1960 Conservation Reserve are urged to get in touch with the County Office as soon as possible.

Among Valley Farmers

By County Agents Ted Sidor and Charles Gavin

Farm flock owners would do well to use extra rams during breeding season. The extra rams speed up lambing and give the lamb crop much more uniformity in size and condition. Farm flock owners who did this in the county last year were well pleased with results and plan to continue this year.

In the grub control trials conducted in the county last winter, the spray gave 100% control while the systemic gave only about 94%-96% control. The systemic made animals a little sick and they were off feed about three weeks. The spray gave us louse control also, and didn't slow the cattle down one bit.

To do the best job with the spray, it should be done by the middle of October or, before cattle get too much hair and wet the animals thoroughly. This is the first practical way we have had offered us for heel fly control and it behooves us as producers to take advantage of it.

Two new insecticides have been found to completely control soft scales, and common insect pests on ornamentals. A thorough spraying of Sevin and Diazinon this time of year will give 100 per cent control of both brown soft scale and cottony camellia scale. Malathion also is effective on cottony camellia scale.

Cottony camellia scale usually is found on holly and camellias. Brown soft scale is found mainly on camellias, holly, and daphne, and is a greenhouse pest of poinsettia and gardenias.

Scale infestations can be recognized by the sooty mold fungus which coats plant leaves. Immature stages of both scales resemble each other closely but brown soft scales vary considerably in size, all present at the same time. Cottony camellia scales vary considerably in size, all present at the same time. Cottony camellia scales are fairly uniform in size and can be identified readily by cottony masses on the undersides of leaves of the previous season's growth.

Both scale varieties are found the year around. Spraying for brown soft scale can be done any time from early May through September. For cottony camellia scale, the most effective time to spray is in August and September when the insects are young. In fact, no control of cottony camellia scale can be obtained by spraying in June and July when only eggs are present.

The recommendation is a Diazinon spray of 6 pounds 25 per cent wettable powder to 100 gallons water (6 tablespoons to 1 gallon for smaller amounts) or a Sevin spray of 2 pounds 50 per cent wettable powder to 100 gallons water (or 2 tablespoons to 1 gallon).

Two other chemicals are being studied at OSC as possible scale controls. One chemical which looks promising is a systemic.

The recent disaster in Roseburg is causing some unnecessary concern about the use of ammonium nitrate, one of the most popular and economical nitrogen-carrying fertilizers used by Oregon farmers. Many news stories could have left the impression that it was ammonium nitrate alone that caused the gigantic explosion, though, with due credit to the press, most news stories emphasized that it was an explosive mixture of ammunium nitrate and diesel oil that caused the damage.

Ammonium nitrate alone will neither burn nor explode, but it is used in various forms and in various combinations to make dynamite and other explosives. Ammonium nitrate serves as a source of oxygen in an explosive mixture. Sodium chlorate, potassium nitrate, and sodium nitrate are other common materials that could serve the same purpose. The other half of the mixture must be burnable (combustible) material, usually made up of carbon, hydrogen, or possibly sulfur in various combinations.

This does not mean that ammonium nitrate should not be treated with equal respect. Remember that if it is mixed with an organic material, it can become a part of an explosive material. Dirty warehouses could, in reality, become dynamite. Any storage place should be kept clean and free from both dirt and loose ammunium nitrate. Chaff, feed, sulphur, oil, and molasses are especially dangerous. Any material from broken or leaking bags should be swept up and removed from the premises. Burn bags as they are emptied.

Chicago Trip, Scholarships Await 4-H'ers

Awards are ready and waiting for 4-H Club members who have done a superior job in the national 4-H Safety and Forestry programs, according to the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, Chicago.

Winners of the 1959 safety state award will be a delegate to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago this fall, with all-expenses paid. The state winner will then be eligible for one of eight national $400 scholarships awarded in this program, the National Committee reports. These awards are provided by General Motors which has supported the 4-H Safety program for 15 years.

The state winner in forestry will receive a handsome pen and pencil set, and will also become eligible for a national award. The latter is an all-expense paid trip to the National 4-H Club Congress. This marks the 12th year that American Forest Products Industries has provided forestry awards, relates the National Committee.

Club members are judged on the basis of achievement in their project work, leadership, and as all-around 4-H'ers. The Cooperative Extension Service makes the selections and announces the winners. Arrangements for the awards are made by the National Committee.

Union County Leads In Fescue Seed Acreage

Union county led all counties in certified red fescue acreage this season, states Ted Sidor, extension agent. Information from the State Certification Office shows that 7,519 acres passed field inspection in 13 counties. 2,570 acres passed inspections in the county in the four varieties, Creeping Red, Rainier, Illahee and Pennlawn red fescues. Most of the certified acreage in Union county was in Illahee and Pennlawn.

Acreage in Marion county ranked a close second with 2,268 acres. Clackamas county had 755 acres, Lane county 600 acres and Jefferson county 484 acres. Smaller acreages also passed inspections in Polk, Benton, Linn, Washington, Yamhill, Multnomah and Jackson counties.

Sidor indicated that the red fescue certification program statewide, practically doubled this year. The bulk of the state acreage was in Illahee, with 2,806 acres and Pennlawn with 3,149 acres.
