SPORTING NEWS.

Jimmy Britt and Packey McFarland, who clash in a 20-round bout at Colma, Cal., this (Saturday) afternoon, began to take life easy Wednesday. Both fighters have cut out the rough work and content themselves with road work and light gymnasium stunts. They are within a couple of pounds of the required weight—133 pounds, five hours before the fight—to which each can easily drop without sacrificing any speed or strength. McFarland's wonderful improvement over his initial training exhibition here has made him the favorite in the betting, the present price being 10 to 9. Measurements of the fighters show that they are quite evenly matched as far as general build goes, whatever advantage there is being in favor of McFarland. He is nine years younger than Britt, has a longer reach by an inch and stands two inches taller.

Roller is anxious to meet Fred Beel, who lately defeated "Farmer" Burns, and then he will go after Gotch and Hackenschmidt. He says he believes he can beat Gotch, and he has $1000 to say that he can. Roller has three or four other wrestling matches on, and after he finishes these engagements he is going east.
