It appears that the greatest expared the student for actual busi- vious. ness or other work in after life. Away with Latin and Greek, was the rally cry of the reformers in educamanual training, domestic science, agriculture, bookkeeping, typewriting, and subjects which will give the boys and girls training in the affairs which they will come into contact with on having school. Few, comparatively, will go to college, and therefore why should the state fashien its educational system for them only?

These are some of the arguments just a few years ago. In answer to nished, and proved to be popular they that today in a school of more than 200 only five students in the and girl in the second year in High of the famous Roman general.

Now the public, or at least an active portion of it, is condemning the vocational courses and wants them abolished. Perhaps they are right. It shows the change in the attitude The Argus will not dispute that point. It is just as logical to expect the bounty hunter, or coyote farmer, to kill the females on his territory as Give us for our children, to expect the sheepman to sell all his ewes or the cattleman to market all his cows. Following that practice the coyote farmer would soon be out of a job.

Nevada, Idaho, California and Washington have practically eliminated the bounty, and as a result, Oregon is being made the dumping ground for all the coyote hides of the West.
