Campaign Costs High Says Judge Blowers

Campaign expenses run high for candidates for the governorship of Oregon, avers Judge L. N. Blowers of Lane county, receptive candidate in the republican primary next year, who has just returned from a trip through eastern Oregon, returning by way of Astoria, Seaside and Newport.

Judge Blowers says he has been advised by well-informed political leaders that at least $10,000 is required of a candidate who seeks the nomination for the governorship.

The judge declares he is not out to buy the governorship and does not worry over the attitude of so called "leaders" but is going directly to the rank and file of the party for support.

"I called on my voters on my trip and met with a very cordial reception," Judge Blowers said. The judge holds to the tenets of progressive republicanism and is a strong advocate of a state income tax.

Last year at the republican primary Judge Blowers was a candidate for delegate to the republican national convention but was unsuccessful. He is a former county judge of Hood River county and has been a Lane county resident for a number of years. He has been living in this city since the first of the year with his son, Paul Blowers.

MOOSE HERD BELIEVED VANISHED FROM LANE

Where are the big moose that at frequent intervals caused consternation and annoyance to ranchers of far western Lane county?

"We can't find trace of the animals," says F. M. Brown, deputy state game warden. Game wardens who have looked over the Lane moose country have failed to find any clues as to the whereabouts of the herd. "I guess they're gone," says Brown, but the deputy declined to commit himself as to any theories as to what has happened to the Lane moose.

This effort of the Oregon state game commission to propagate moose in western Lane and Douglas counties seems not to be working as hoped.

It was some six years ago that the state game commission brought a nerd of six big moose from Alaska to liberate in the open country in southwest Lane and south west Douglas.

These animals during the past few years have been reported from time to time by residents of the western districts of Lane and Douglas counties. The reports were not always favorable to the moose. The moose are said to have become too tame by their contact with the settled areas in their new prowling ground. This area was quite different from the almost unlimited and unsettled home they left in Alaska.

The big beasts are declared to have caused ranch owners much grief and complaints were numerous at one time. At times the big fellows lumbered their way through ranches without regard to damages. There were various amusing tales of fright caused when some hunter or angler not knowing of the presence of the moose would come upon one of the big animals.

One time a moose halted a train when he tried to cross a trestle and fell between the ties and was unable to extricate himself. The train crew pried the animal loose and then train service was resumed.

Whether any of the moose still roam the western Lane district is not known but the game warden says he believes the beasts have disappeared. It seems as though this might be the end or near the end of the experiment to raise moose in the Oregon wilds. It is doubtful that the experiment will be undertaken again.

RALPH HAND COMPLETES COURSE IN AVIATION

The Sentinel has recently received a letter from Frank Krammer, chief pilot for the Central Washington Air Service, located at Wenatchee, Wash., containing news of Ralph Hand, who has completed a course in flying at their school of instruction. In the letter Mr. Krammer classed Mr. Hand as a "star student" and said he learned the art of flying exceptionally fast. With less than nine hours of instruction he was ready to fly and his success as a pilot was assured by the instructor.

Mr. Hand recently resigned his office as a deputy sheriff for Chelan county, Washington, and a late edition of a Wenatchee paper contained a story calling him the "flying sheriff." He is well known in Cottage Grove, having lived here and was featured on wrestling cards at various times in this city as well as in matches in numerous other cities on the coast.

The Sentinel also received a picture of Mr. Hand in flying costume standing near his plane.

A handy contrivance for any kitchen is a group of rods suspended from the ceiling on a rope running through a pulley, thus allowing it to be raised and lowered. This rack may be used in drying towels or other clothing in rainy weather. The greatest heat is near the ceiling, and the clothing is entirely out of the way of the housewife.

Tax Turnover Is Made.

Turnover of taxes made by the sheriff's office to the county treasurer last Thursday afternoon showed a little more business than last week's turnover. The tax collector's office is being stormed again this week by taxpayers.

The turnover was itemized as follows:

State and county	$20,554.72
Cities	4,388.42
School districts	7,624.68
Road districts	1,063.48
Union high schools	543.36
Port of Siuslaw	114.93
Forest fire patrol	138.24
Grey digger poisoning	7.95
Total	$34,435.77

Fruit-stains may be removed from the hands without irritation by rubbing with cornmeal moistened with vinegar.

Fingernails may be protected when gardening by wetting them and drawing them over a wet cake of toilet soap, forcing it under the nails. The soap is easily washed out and protects from stains and irritations from the dirt.
