RUFUS, EINZIG AND JULIUS.

Governor Meier has made some splendid appointments during his term of office, and he has made some that, to The Sentinel, seem to have been ill-advised. The Sentinel never has approved William Einzig as state purchasing agent. The Sentinel has pointed out instances in which it seemed that Mr. Einzig profited personally through his state position.

Governor Meier did not alone make this appointment. The law says this appointment is made by the board of control, but State Treasurer Holman, appointed to that position by Governor Meier, and determined to assist the governor in carrying out every reasonable wish, voted with the governor for the appointment, but the selection of Einzig was made by the governor and it was at his request that Holman approved the selection, with which he had nothing else to do, so the governor is actually responsible for Einzig.

But Holman is now of the opinion that the selection was a poor one. He seems to be convinced that Einzig is not a fit man for the job, and he wishes to do away with him. The Sentinel believes that Holman has held that opinion for several months, but because of his high regard for the governor has made no fuss until now.

When Rufus, who must be given credit for being sincere in wishing the state's affairs honestly conducted, could no longer countenance what he believed to be petty graft on the part of the purchasing agent, wrote Mr. Einzig a courteous letter asking for an explanation of complaints made against him, Einzig responded by entering the state treasurer's office during Mr. Holman's absence and using abusive and profane language to the women employes of that office. Rufus would stand for much to assist the governor in whatever his program may be, but he is to be commended for going on the warpath and demanding the purchasing agent's immediate dismissal following such an uncalled for and ungentlemanly exhibition as this. Even should the charges of petty graft be not true, the purchasing agent has demonstrated by his unseemly display of temper, and abuse of those with whom he had had no altercation, that he is totally unfit for any state position.

It seems to The Sentinel that the governor can not refuse to ask the dismissal of Einzig without sacrificing the respect of his hosts of friends who believe in him, who believe he is trying to uproot petty graft in state affairs, who believe that women employes are entitled to respectful treatment from state officials, who believe that one so low as to abuse decent and refined women is too low to be kept on the state payroll.

SOLUTION FOR A MYSTERY.

So far as The Sentinel has been able to observe, from careful reading of the daily press for several weeks, solution of the famous petition hoax has progressed no further than positive proof that the also famous bottle of mineral water that was given a cozy resting place in a somewhat famous safe, either with or without opening the safe—new stories are indefinite on that point—actually was mineral water, and not the inebriating fluid that we out in the sticks were of the opinion it might be.

The Sentinel believes it can give material aid in solving the great mystery of the alleged disappearance of the petitions—we use the word "alleged" because we out in the sticks don't believe any petitions disappeared, at least not for long, or for any great distance. If The Sentinel can't solve the mystery, it can at least point an easy way for identification of the person in whose fertile brain originated the idea of putting over the hoax—and we use the word "hoax" with full knowledge of objections to that term which have been voiced by an editorial friend who has the reputation of being the most proficient and most rapid postal card reader in any postoffice in the United States, perhaps in the world.

In a recent issue of the Corvallis Gazette-Times, edited by the pulchritudinous Claudius Eclair Ingalls, who is also postmaster of his city—and personally handles all postal card mail—appeared an editorial in which it was stated that The Sentinel had demanded the appointment of W. J. Kerr as chancellor for the institutions of higher learning of the state. The Sentinel was made to say that Mr. Kerr is the only man in the state capable of dragging the institutions out of the mess in which they are now mired.

While this writer has great admiration for Prexy Kerr, whom he has considered a personal friend for a fifth of a century, The Sentinel has not, nor has its editor, either in public or private, expressed a preference for chancellor. The Sentinel believes the state board of higher education composed of persons perfectly capable of making the selection without suggestion from it, eager as they might be to accept such suggestion.

Now for solution of the great hoax mystery. The editorial referred to could not have been invented by any less a master mind than that which concocted the petition hoax. Find out who wrote that editorial for Claudius Eclair and we shall have the person who knows all about what, if anything, happened to the petitions.

In a report of the recent mining congress held in Eugene the Eugene News said: "One of the feature attractions was the golf panning exhibition." Someone must have got into a game with Claud Ingalls of Corvallis town.

Professor Piccard, navigator of the stratosphere, reported that 10 miles up he heard a drumming noise. Must have been the presidential campaign, or some live advertiser out to bust the depression.

Now they are going to make lumber of weeds. There is enough such material on parcels of vacant property near our lawn to keep a 100,000-capacity mill in operation for a year.

Warnings have been issued that counterfeit $20 bills are in circulation in Oregon. To show that editors are more astute than ordinary individuals, we'll bet that not one of them has one of the bills in his till.
