Consideration of Human Element Blamed for Split

Tokio, Jan. 3.—A cooperative organization of capital and labor which would not ignore human instincts and feelings should be established throughout the world, in the opinion of Mrs. Ko-ko Tanaka, woman adviser to the Japanese labor delegation in the International Labor Conference at Washington.

Contributing her views on the labor question to a Japanese women's magazine, Mrs. Tanaka says that if such a system were inaugurated, the laborer would be emancipated from the position of a wage-earner and would employ his energy with hope and zeal. She continues:

"This is no mere paper argument. Such system is actually practiced in a ticket manufactory at Tokio. It is a small factory with less than 50 hands. The owner leaves the management entirely to his employes. The profits are divided equally between owner and employes. The experiment has stood the test of several years and it could be applied to any factory on a much larger scale."

Mrs. Tanaka believes that union recognition should be granted by the Japanese government and that the union idea should, in due course, be extended to woman labor in Japan.
