Lovejoy Hospice

In an effort to help you to be better informed about hospice care in our community, Lovejoy Hospice produces an informative question and answer column each month. Look for our column printed on the fourth Wednesday edition of the 'Illinois Valley News.'

March is NATIONAL SOCIAL WORK MONTH. What is the role of the hospice social worker?

A: The hospice social worker is a skilled caring professional who is available to help hospice patients and families.

Hospice social workers have either a four or a six year degree in Social Work. They also have additional education and training in issues that can affect patients and families in the last phase of life. The hospice social worker can help by being a compassionate "hearing ear" or by holding a hand. They are familiar with community resources and can make options available.

The social worker is also a skilled counselor who can help patients, families – young and old - and caregivers discuss and sort out confusing and difficult feelings. They offer help with family communications that can be challenging at this time of life, and can assist with making your wishes known through Advanced Directives. The hospice social worker is a very important part of the hospice team and services, clearly adding to the "quality of life" philosophy that hospice is known for.

The Heart of Caring
