WHICH IS BEST.

A problem that is rapidly forcing itself upon the attention of the American people is whether corporations shall carry on the commercial transactions, including transportation as well as all the other ramifications of business life, or whether the government shall gradually assume control and absorb the functions that are now carried on by corporations and are daily more and more passing into the control and management of incorporated companies.

Thomas W. Higginson in the Nation says: "There are a good many persons, I take it, who have reached just this point of conviction—namely, to hold that, if the government carries on the post-office fairly well, as it certainly does, it may well undertake the telegraph also, as in England; that if it can conduct a bankrupt railroad, through a "receiver," it could also carry on a successful one; that if a city can supply its inhabitants with water, it might as well try the experiment of supplying them with gas. How far this tendency is to go, such persons do not undertake to say—and here they stop short of Mr. Bellamy and his thorough supporters; but in the meantime they are willing and glad to put themselves on record as looking in that same direction. They find themselves confronted with a situation which has nowhere been better stated than by a strong opponent of state socialism, Prof. A. T. Hadley, of Yale University. He says in the Political Science Quarterly for December, 1888: "Modern life demands organized business action. There are two great organizations, either one of which can manage it—organized capital, or organized government." If this be the real alternative, there is certainly an increasing number of persons who would prefer to trust the government. This is, at any rate, the present writer's inclination."

In the consideration of this question there are salient and important points to consider. While Mr. Higginson emphatically places himself on record as in favor of government control, and perhaps the majority of the thinking reasoning people will coincide with him in opinion, quite a large number will take the other view claiming that the state lacks the personal individuality incentive that still attaches to the corporation, no matter how large its numbers, power and influence; also, that the state at best is but inefficiently managed.

On the other hand the advocates of state control show the immense danger arising from the power of corporations, centered in the real individual continuity of management, and possessing all the selfish greed that can be developed in an individual, while it cannot exert any of the generous and charitable instincts and practices that frequently rule even in the most wealthy individuals. While in the state, even with the corruption that is said to adhere thereto, the elements of continuous individual control cannot exist in our government, and the selfishness akin to individual greed cannot rule, and as for the inefficiency of state management it is largely the bug-a-boo of political place seekers, being their only shouting capital to use for personal advancement, for the government affairs are as skillfully carried on as any private or corporate affairs, the grumblers to the contrary, notwithstanding. Then to the enlargement and extension of government business would naturally create a closer and more systematic administration of its affairs.

By close inspection of the sources of argument pro and con it will be found that those for government control originate from persons allied and in sympathy with the people, while those against government control and in favor of corporate management exclusively, are from persons whose interest and sympathies are predominated by the corporate and money powers of the land.

The question has many phases, however, and requires careful study and consideration, and movements for or against should be carefully weighed and judged before they are advocated or entered into.

A TERSE and critical writer in the Farmer's Friend gives the value of farm mortgages in the United States aggregate $8,089,637,635. The average interest on these mortgages amounts each year to $347,101,104, which with direct and indirect taxes of $465,045,445 and a school tax of $108,949,528 foots up a total of $1,305,163,077, and the Central Methodist says "add to this the demands of trusts, transportation, combines and the "bearing" of values by speculators and you may have some idea what becomes of values created by agricultural industry." It would seem that "all the world and the rest of mankind" gets a gouge at the farmers, and we are classed as a lot of blockheads without sense or energy enough to make a rational kick, and we have about concluded that we are weak in the "spine of our back."

Mrs. Jacob Scondue, of Springfield, Ohio, while visiting with her father, in law at Gaynor City, Mo., was taken very sick with cholera morbus. A physician was sent for, but as the doctor was not at home, Mr. S. E. Wible a merchant of Gaynor City, handed the husband of the sick lady, a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and ask him to try that, and if did not cure, he need not pay for it; but it did its work, and before returning to their home, they called and procured another bottle. Uncle John Scondue says, he never be without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. 25 and 50 cent bottlds for sale by Foshay & Mason.

A Perfect Laxative

should be mild, and prompt and pleasant, with no griping or purgative effects. It should also incite the liver to action, aid digestion, and relieve the kidneys. Like nothing else, Paine's Celery Compound is a perfect laxative and cures constipation where all other remedies fail.

"As a gentle laxative Paine's Celery Compound is surely without a peer I think I ought to know, since I have tried remedy after remedy for about six years, and have found nothing that equals it in my case of costiveness." J. B. JENKINS, Teacher, Cloyd's Creek, Tenn.

Paine's Celery Compound is promp and pleasant. As a laxative it leaves little to be desired. I have great confidence in its merits."
ALBERT LEANARD, Asso't Editor
