BE PROMPT.

THERE is no element in human action and intercourse that enters so largely into justice and right as does promptness in dealing. Many persons in forming and in carrying out their ideas of justice fail to make account of the element of time. They intend to deal justly with every one, to withhold from no one his due, to fulfill every obligation and satisfy every claim; but they feel no special duty to hasten these acts of justice. If they are done eventually they are content, and think that others should be content also. The hours or days or weeks that may elapse between the claim and their fulfillment of it do not seem to them very important, if it is but ultimately discharged. They would not for the world evade a debt, but they will delay its payment without any compunction. They intend to throw all their influence on the side of the right, but whether to-day or to-morrow they have not decided. Now there are, of course, some cases where this may be unattended with any apparent evil results; there are others where more or less inconvenience ensues; and still others where all manner of suffering and loss is entailed. Those who come close enough to the poorer classes to succeed in gaining their confidence find that prolific source of the suffering they are trying to alleviate is the unpunctual payment of services rendered. Happily the people who deliberately cheat a workman or a workwoman out of his or her just earnings are extremely few; but the number who put them off to a more convenient season is by no means small. Slight excuses, such as the trouble of preparing for it beforehand, of making change, or of breaking into some interesting occupation will suffice to quiet whatever compunctions they may have in postponing a payment that is due. They can not see the disappointment, the weariness, the denial of comforts or necessities, the inability to pay a pressing creditor or to employ a needed physician, perhaps the sickness, suffering, ruin, and even death, which may often follow their procrastination. Even where the results are less immediately disastrous they often give rise to a series of offenses. He who fails to collect his dues frequently fails in consequence to pay his debts, and thus a whole series of unpaid workers may trace back their various troubles to a single delinquent. Such people will say that in the end they pay all they owe, but this is not so, for they owe promptness. Without this, justice has not been rendered. Tardy payment can never atone for the injury which may have been inflicted. No regret, no apology, no added interest, even, can ever undo what has been done, or restore what by this negligence and indifference has been taken away. Though it is true that such results may not follow, it is certain that they often do, and we are never sure that they will not. Often those who press the least for their just dues need them the most, and we can not foresee the consequences of delay.

As Senator Stanford's term of office draws to a close, it becomes apparent that his becoming his own successor is to be strongly objected too. In all probability no man can be found in California who in private character, gentlemanly instincts, munificent liberality in certain directions and liberal hospitality could surpass Mr. Stanford, but in the matter of filling the office of senator or developing peculiar fitness for the position, the record does not show up to any very conspicuous amount in that direction. The majority of people do not bite at government money loaning plans. The Chronicle says: The wave, with considerable asperity, asks: "What has Stanford done for California? If he had even faithfully remained at his post to guard the interests of his state that duty fulfilled might have been passed to his credit. But he has been absent from Washington about half his time, paired with some equally negligent democrat. Have five years thus spent reconciled the republicans of the state to the medicine which they swallowed with wry faces in 1885?" To which we may answer republicans are not reconciled to their medicine, although it seems to be the desire of the democrats to make them appear to be.

JAPAN seems to be the fruitful field of the cholera epidemic and it is said to be prevailing to a frightful extent at Yokahoma. The reason given for the epidemic of prevailing to the extent that it does is that the failure of the rice crop has left the people without subsistence and consequently in a weakened condition, unable to withstand the ravages of the disease. The authorities of San Francisco have declared Yokohoma an infected district, thus laying a partial embargo upon shipping from that port.

THE state board of education of Washington has adopted a rule that any teacher chewing or smoking tobacco about the school house or grounds, shall be liable to revocation of his certificate to teach. Recently an aged schoolmaster was objected to the rule and his certificate revoked. That is a move in the right direction.

A Ripe Old Age.

J. H. Holcomb and wife, of Belcherville, Texas, have celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary, and are still hale and hearty. The secret of their long life and good health is that they correct any slight ailment promptly, and in that way avoid serious sickness. Like most every one else, they are more frequently troubled with constipation than any other physical disorder. To correct this they take St. Patrick's Pills in preference to any other because, as Mr. Holcomb says "They are a mild pill and, besides keep the whole system in good order. We prize them very highly." For sale by Foshay & Mason. Druggists.

French Tansy Wafers.

These wafers are a sure and safe specific for all kinds of female troubles and will remove all obstructions to the monthly periods, no matter what the cause. They are just what every woman needs, and can be used safely. For sale by the Livingstone Medicine Co., manufacturers, Portland, Oregon, also from our sole agent, J. A. Cumming, druggist, Albany block, Albany, Oregon.

Jackets and Wraps.

I am now receiving my fall and winter stock of ladies, misses and children jackets and wraps which are of the latest style and good value and as cheap as the same goods can be bought. I have a lot of ladies New markets carried over from last year, which I am selling at cost to make room for my arrivals. SAMUEL E. YOUNG.

Bartlett Pears.

I am now in the market and prepared to buy all the Bartlett Pears brought to me in a shipping condition. Parties having pears to sell will do well to see me. SAMUEL E. YOUNG.

Taken In.

I often use to read the newspaper stand to my wife, said a gentleman in our town the other day, but once I was fairly taken in by one of those little advertisements of groceries and patent medicines. The paragraph began with the modest account of a sea serpent but ended by setting forth the virtue of Blackburn's Pills, say: If you trade with them you will never get taken in.

Corset! Corset!

We make a specialty of large and misses fine corsets and warrant. We have a drive in a fine sateen corset at 75 cents. extra good value.

SAMUEL E. YOUNG.
