TOO MUCH SELFISHNESS.

The Tribune believes in a Democratic form of government, the Initiative and Referendum, and the rule of the people in everything, yet it does seem that there is one place the average voter falls down—where he is not big enough and broad-minded enough to put public good above personal avarice and selfishness. This has been demonstrated at former elections, and it was again demonstrated at the election just past.

Every measure on the recent ballot tending to increase taxes was turned down. The two measures initiated by the wealthy editor of the Oregon Journal because of spite at the Oregonian and at the country press, were unquestionably endorsed because the electors thought they saw a saving (not merit) therein. The bill to establish a home for delinquent children, etc.; the Normal School bill,—and the State Tax bill were all defeated. Why? It seems a grave charge to say that the voters of Oregon have put dollars and cents above the welfare of our children and the good of our commonwealth, yet the cold facts say they have. Many, many schools are closed in Oregon today because of a lack of teachers and yet we refuse to train more. The cost of living has more than doubled, yet when our State Tax Commission asks for a little more money during 1919 to run the executive family, we register an emphatic "No", knowing at the same time that it must be sadly starved.

A fair example of the spirit that is doing this, was illustrated in a little dialogue that was overheard at the polling place in Port Orford election day. A couple were looking over a sample ballot when one said to the other "don't vote for that bill, it would increase our taxes." Never a thought as to its merits or demerits—only, "it will increase our taxes."

From such a condition, one of three things is going to happen. The voters must awake to realization of their duty as good citizens, the tax-levying power must be returned to the Legislature, or else our state will go to the bow wows. It is up to the voters.

OVER THE TOP.

The United War Work Campaign is in full swing all over the state and nation. Several counties in Oregon are already over the top. If the quota in your district is not raised, hunt up the official solicitor before Saturday night and help further to raise it. Your sacrifice then will be as nothing compared to that of the boys who have left home and country to fight for your freedom upon the battlefields of Europe. Now that they have fought a good fight and won, show that your heart is with them and that you appreciate what they have done and want to make things a little easier for them until they get back home. In this issue of the TRIBUNE, as in every other issue where the letters of our soldier boys are published, they tell the story of the good work these societies are doing. Telegraphic dispatches say all over the state the people are giving as never before. Our boys have won the war, and a golden stream of gratitude is going out to them from Oregon. Will Curry county let her splendid record of the past be tarnished by failing in the final hour to do her share? God forbid! You, and you, and you, see that YOUR district is over the top Saturday night, and once again our county will have performed its patriotic duty.

THE WAR IS OVER.

The war has ceased almost as suddenly and unexpectedly as it began. Overnight, as it were, Germany has turned from one of the mightiest military nations the world has ever known, into a seething mass of chaos and rebellion, without a leader and groping blindly for a way out of her dilemma. It will fall to the allies to help these people, who for more than four years have been their bitter enemies, to establish a staple government. But before anything, if justice be done, let the allies punish, as his crime merits, every German no matter how high or low who has in any way been responsible for the atrocities that have made this the most horrible war in all history.

"Canadian Convalescent Hospital
Bramley Kent, Eng.
Aug. 1st, 1918.

Dearest Mother:

I have nothing of much interest to write about, but drop a few lines. I just received Mr. Lowthorp's letter also McGinnis's written 4 months ago, and answered them. My leg remains about the same. They sent me to Orpington for X-ray of my leg bones—don't know yet what it showed. I believe the bone was broken in two places and that the hole in my leg was where one of the sharp ends stuck thru when I tried to run on it. Orpington is where chickens of that breed originated. Just before we reached the place we saw an airplane fall in a field, and we climbed thru a hedge and got the fellow out and took him to the Hospital. He wasn't hurt much, just a broken nose, black eye, and a little crazy in the head. Think he will be O. K. in a few days. He was doing some fancy stunts and hit the tops of some trees, and he just mowed the brush. Yesterday I went over to Tooting on a visit, Gee, I got a royal welcome! They all said they had been talking about Dad and wondering what had become of him. My message girl asked me to visit her family again. Said she had seen me once as she was going thru Bromley on a Buss. They are all very friendly and kind.

One day last week I went up to London in company with a Scotch Boy who is here. We went to the Canadian Y. M. C. A. first and had something to eat, then went to St. Pauls Cathedral. I had been there last January, but wanted a better look. They let us into the Crypt under the Chapel where a lot of England's greatest, are buried, or rather, kept in great stone Coffins or Tombs. Lord Nelson, the Duke of Wellington, Buler Lytton, Florence Nightingale and scores of others lie there. "The Anthems pealing o'er their dust, thru dim Cathedral isles". Some of the old Normans are there, and old Knights, Heroes of the Crusades, who died trying to plant the banners of Christendom on the hills of Palestine, where the English are even now driving out the Turk. The great Funeral Car that carried "The Iron Duke" on his last journey is kept there. It is draped in flags and banners carried or captured, at the Battle of Waterloo, where they smashed Napoleon and his dream of world conquest, just as we are going to smash the Kaiser and his devils dream. The Great Black Car also carries a great heap of Drums, Muskets, Bayonets, and other relics of that great Struggle.

On the Bronze Tablets on the tomb are names of places captured and battles won by the old Duke, who they boast never lost a gun. And those names are familiar. Some of the towns in France I know. You see we are fighting over the exact ground where he struggled with Napoleon—queer is'nt it how History repeats itself? and yet there are fools who say we will never have another war. I hope we won't for several generations, but it will come again; as long as human nature lasts men will Fight—and there will be a sorry time for the nation that forgets how. I hope it won't be ours. It gives one a queer feeling to stand beside those old warriors and think of these things, and it makes one Mighty proud to be of the same Breed and Blood and to be following in their footsteps. We stayed some time, but had to come away, and "Leave them alone in their Glory."

I would like to tell you of a place in France—of the great Caves and tunnels, one of the greatest in the world and how France remembers her dead of hundreds of brave French soldiers killed by falling roof of rock years ago, and now walled up with loose boulders, and of the smell not awful now but like dried meat spoiled—and of a Great flag, The Tricolor of France, which hangs from the roof guarding their bones, and an awful thing that happened us near the place, but names and dates are tabooed by the Censor, and the story must wait.

Well mother dear I must close. Thank you for the clippings you sent me. Think you have done fine with your little dairy. I sent Dad a little souvenir, hope he gets it. I dont know where the boys are you asked about but think they are alive yet. Love and kisses to you and kind thoughts to all.

From your son,

Pvt. Geo. D. Cameron, [illegible]

Mrs. Cameron has this following [illegible] received from her husband:

"Now, I'm out at Bramley, Surrey, England, Convalescent again. His leg still pains him. He expects to be there a month and then go before the Dr. again, requesting his classification to be called, but feeling is that he may be sent back to Canada."

Sane Election Results.

With the House and Senate both Republican, the late election must be viewed as a Republican victory. The landslide to Gov. Withycombe and Senator McNary, especially the the latter, was a surprise. John S. Coke has apparently been defeated by a very narrow margin for the Supreme Bench by Judge Bennett, the Eastern Oregon candidate.

Following are some of the totals in the county vote.
