FRED LOCKLEY.

Among the several candidates for the Republican nomination as Secretary of State is found the name of Fred Lockley.

Few men in the state have a wider acquaintance than Mr. Lockley; his long newspaper work has taken him into its most remote corners, and his winning personality has won him friends wherever he went. His letters to the Oregon Jurnal, while in the Y. M. C. A. work in France, told the home folks of the welfare of our boys from every county in the state.

Capable, warm-hearted, broad-minded, and above all a friend of the common people unapproachable by corrupt influences, Fred Lockley would make a splendid Secretary of State, and unless these qualifications and his past record count for naught, other aspirants for that office might as well engage passage on the steamer Defeat for her voyage up Salt river.

IT HELPS THE HOME.

The women of Curry county should by all means take advantage of the Red Cross nursing lessons that are being offered to them free. The advantages of such instruction in a county like Curry, where medical aid is hard to get, cannot be over estimated. It is a rare opportunity to learn something worth while—something that will better and protect the home.

The Northern Curry Community Club is entitled to much credit for its efforts in this matter, which caused the nurse to be sent to Curry.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE.

Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, is developing much strength in the presidential race, and it would not be surprising to see him land the Republican nomination, an event that would not cause the TRIBUNE to shed any tears of regret.

The Southern Pacific did not have wealth enough in its coffers to buy Hiram Johnson, and his brilliant attainments are arrousing enthusiasm and support in eastern states that no other western man was ever able to arrouse.

Dairy Products Of Two Counties Large.

The dairy industry of Coos county is growing by leaps and bounds. A few years ago it was—excepting two or three places—more or less of an experiment. But today it is firmly on its feet and taking a stride that will carry it in a few years to the front as the county's greatest industry.

And Curry county is also coming into its own in the dairy industry. That country is particularly suited for the industry, and in the northern section at least is it showing wonderful growth. Milk products of Curry county are manufactured into butter, cheese and condenced product. With the greater amount, of course, being manufactured into the first two named products. Figures compiled by the cheese association of Coos and Curry counties, show that total production of cheese in the two counties for outside markets was 3,500,000 pounds, valued at $1,050,000.

Although the local condensery did not enter the field until late last year, and did not handle as large a volume of milk as would otherwise have gone to the plant, the condensed milk produced in the county for outside markets reached 40,000 cases, valued at $240,000.

It is also estimated that at least 8,000,000 pounds of raw milk, worth $280,000 was consumed by the people of the county. Also that about fifteen percent of the cheese, butter and condensed milk produced in the county was consumed.

Including the value of the Curry county cheese which was shipped by the two-county association the total value of the dairy product of Coos county is approximately $2,110,000 of which exports totaled $1,830,000 However, there was much butter and milk produced in Curry county, a considerable amount of the former being sold on the outside market. Making allowance for this, would make $3,000,000 for Coos and Curry dairy products in 1919 a conservative estimate.

The above showing of the development of the dairy industry in Coos and Curry counties appeared in last week's Western World. It is quite probable, however, that the production in Curry is considerable larger than estimated. Not only do several of the large dairies of northern Curry make butter that does not go through the cheese association, but the dairy output of the Rogue river and Chetco sections has been greatly increased during the past year or two and the total production for the county is no doubt larger than the business done through the cheese association would indicate.
