THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES.

As predicted in these columns last week the democratic national convention at Chicago nominated Grover Cleveland for president, though the honor of the second place on the ticket was not given ex-Governor Gray. The honor was conferred upon A. E. Stevenson, of Illinois, who was first assistant postmaster-general under Cleveland. The ticket which the democrats of the nation expect to lead them to victory this fall is Cleveland, of New York, and Stevenson, of Illinois.

The convention was enthusiastic, the followers of each favorite son for the first place, Cleveland, Hill and Boies, having worked up all the sentiment possible for their favorites, and in the contest for the vice-presidency, the interest was equally great.

The platform adopted by the convention reaffirms the allegiance of democrats to the principles of the party as formulated by Jefferson, most emphatically denounces federal interference with state elections, and stigmatizes the Force bill as the most infamous measure that was ever introduced. It declares in favor of a tariff for revenue only, and demands only the collection of such taxes as shall be necessary to the necessities of the government economically administered. Reciprocity is denounced as a measure of retaliation and a means of closing many of the markets of the world to American products. Stringent laws for controling and diminishing trusts are demanded. It demands that all public domain be held for settlement under the homestead laws. The silver question is treated as follows:

"We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, and to the coinage of both gold and silver without discrimination against either metal or charge for mintage, but the dollar unit on the coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, or adjusted through international agreement, or by such safeguards of law as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the payment of debt."

It favors civil service reform, and denounces the policy of federal office holders usurping control of conventions. As to the relations with foreign powers, a friendly, though firm, attitude is recommended. It favors the building and maintenance of such a navy as will enable the nation to maintain its honor and dignity at home and abroad. Sympathy is expressed for the Russian Jews, and for the people of Ireland, struggling for self government. Admitting undesirable immigrants is denounced, while the platform favors encouraging industrious and worthy foreigners to come. It favors just and liberal pensions to ex-soldiers, their widows and dependents, but denounces the present administration of the pension bureau as incompetent and corrupt. Liberal appropriations are recommended for improving the Mississippi river and all other great water-ways, and the early construction of the Nicaragua canal is favored. It favors liberal appropriations for the Columbian Exposition. It recommends liberal appropriations by the several states for the maintenance of public schools. It approves the admission of all territories as states as soon as they shall have sufficient population, and recommends all territorial offices shall be filled by residents of the respective territories. In conclusion the platform favors the abolishing of contract convict labor, and prohibiting the employment of children under fifteen years in factories.

It is yet possible that the appropriation of $2,850,000 for the ship railway at The Dalles will be allowed, the members of the house having discovered that the improvement of the Columbia is not for the benefit of Oregon alone, but that Washington and Idaho will also derive a benefit.

Two years ago the democrats of Oregon shouted themselves hoarse praising Governor Pennoyer, but if he don't quit abusing Cleveland, some of them will get hoarse hooping condemnations upon his head

THE NATION'S BIRTH DAY.

Independence day next Monday will be the 116th anniversary of American independence, and on that day it is the duty of all—old and young, grave and gay, rich and poor—to lay aside the ordinary avocations of life and join in celebrating that event; the greatest, not to us alone, but the greatest political event of any age or country.

The spirit of freedom and civil equality breathed forth that day has spread and multiplied until it has permeated the political, intellectual and moral life of every civilized country on the globe. The principles which those noble forefathers conceived, and for which so many of them laid down their lives, have changed the face of nature and wrought a revolution in the habits of mankind. Our country has advanced with such astounding speed, that breathless, we have reached a moment when it seems as if distance had been annihilated, time made as naught, the invisible seen, the intangible felt, and the impossible accomplished.

Were it possible for the patriots, from whom we inherited our birthright of liberty and independence, to return and view the results for which they so freely spent their fortunes and shed their blood, they would be astounded by the magnitude and extent of their own labors. They would be utterly unable to recognize the fruits of their martyrdom, a few features of the face of nature would be recognizable—they would know the Great lakes, the Hudson river, Niagara falls and the gulf of Mexico; but the great world of commerce, the modes of travel and communication, the fields of literature and sciences, would be a dream, a fairy tale, a chapter from the Arabian Knights.

Thanks to the toils and struggles, the devotion to home and country of the past generation, that we know we are more fortunate than our fathers. We believe our children will be happier than we. We know that this century is more enlightened than the last. We believe that the time to come will be better and more glorious than this.

We hope, we trust, that the achievements of the coming generation shall not tarnish the efforts of this, as those of the present have eclipsed those of the past. We of the present have the development of the mind and the moulding of the character of the future generation, and it devolves upon us to see to it that we inculcate those principles of honor and virtue, that regard for home and country, that will enable them to stand on the highest pinnacle of our achievements, and lend a mighty hand to building that glorious civilization of which we can but faintly dream.
