The Mountaineer thinks we must have had a change of heart recently because of our favorable mention of John H. Mitchell, but it is wrong. It is Mitchell that has undergone a change. He fell out of the silver camp in which Bro. Doubitt has his abode some years since.

After balloting for senator a few times the majority party in the legislature will discover that neither Corbett nor McBride can be elected, and will begin to look about for a party candidate. Then why should not an Eastern Oregon man be selected on whom the honor may fall? Why not select J. N. Williamson who represents the biggest district in Oregon in the state senate. He possesses many qualifications and has only one sin as a legislator to answer for—the fathering of the apportionment bill in the last legislature. Williamson would be a representative of the genuine interests and would do more for Oregon than would a man who can't get in the grave or one with a foot in a sling.—Dalles Times-Mountaineer.

Williamson would not only represent the farming but every other interest in the state. He would be a senator from Oregon and for Oregon. He possesses honesty and integrity of purpose and a headfull of brains, being the principal qualifications necessary to a man who fills that position. But J. N. Williamson is not a candidate for senatorial honors, and the mention of his name is a compliment. But if he should by any possibility become the choice of the legislature for senator, no community in Oregon would be more pleased than Crook county, his home for many years.

The Crook County Journal has issued a handsome 34-page annual filled with interesting reading matter, descriptive of Prineville and Crook county. It is beautiful to the editor, A. C. Palmer, who has exercised care in all the articles appearing therein so that only facts are stated and not highly colored fiction, as well as to the Times-Democrat Printing company, of Portland, who did the fine mechanical work.—Shaniko Leader.

Scalp Bounty Law.

The proposed bill upon the scalp bounty question perhaps will be as fair as any one that could be devised. The effects of the bill will be to make those counties receiving the greatest benefits, to pay the most money for its maintenance. The law will have the effect of raising the taxes all over the state for taxe purposes in order to meet the state's payment of two-thirds and will have the effect of raising the general taxes in the counties that get most of the varmits for which the bounty is intended to destroy. The redeeming feature in that case will be the ability to pay in the last place out of the revenues arising from taxation, and greater than all, and the principal good to consider will be in the increase in flocks and herds, and valuable domestic animal upon which these animals subsist whether they be poultry, sheep or cattle.

The destruction of these predatory animals will enable the small farmer to own and profit from his small herds of sheep or other domestic animals, and his land may be taxed for the maintenance of the law his success in business will enable him to spare an extra tax with profit as well as the general advance in the thrift and prosperity that would follow. There may be some who will lose their payments a loss to them, but such should ever remember that that which results in the greatest good to the greatest number will ever redound upon all and none are so situated that the results for good will not lessen the burden of their taxation in some other way unappreciated by them will redound to their benefit.

The matter of ascertaining the scalps has some objections, one of which is, the fact that a party who has destroyed the animals mentioned must travel to the county seat for the presentation of the scalp to the county clerk at an expense upon him that precludes any idea of profit whatever. The necessary expense incurred is not liquidated, especially if the person should happen to live in the remote parts of a county. The second objection is that the clerk alone is the person to go and there is no person present who has knowledge of the business of the claim, all evidence being the affidavit having been destroyed.

In some of the Eastern Oregon counties the amounts of warrants issued against the county treasurer will run up into the thousands and will be without possible check or detection of wrong. The bill ought to be amended.

The Automobile Mower.

The automobile mowing machine could have been conceived and executed by none other than an American. It is the application of the motor to horses' drudgery, to not only lighten but to facilitate farm work for men as well as horses. It is a comparatively simple machine, and yet one that has more uses than that for which it is designed.

There was probably no exhibit in the mechanical department of the Paris exposition which created a greater interest than this American automobile. Early in July it was taken out into the country near Paris and given the most thorough tests, and again later in the season it was shown in an exhibition conducted by the Meux Agricultural Society at Mitry-Claye.

The tests in each case were sufficient to satisfy the European agriculturists that the American machine was the most practical of its kind. It did the work with far greater ease and rapidity than could the best of the horse mowers. It cut a clean, straight swath five feet wide, and was manipulated in the field with perfect ease.

But to tell what the automobile mower is—and the accompanying illustration gives a clear idea of that—it is a light, compact, easily handled affair, with a pleasing paucity of mechanism. It is unnecessary to describe the mower, which is an ordinary machine with a small third wheel in front to support the small gasoline engine. The engine is of the two cylinder, horizontal type which was found to be superior for this work to the vertical engine, which, although high speed, gives a decided jerking motion. This motion caused such a jarring of the cutter bar that an uneven cut resulted, and there was a decided waste in the harvesting of the crop. The engine is of about eight horse power and has a belt wheel attachment, so that it may be used for stationary work. Indeed, it was the plan of the builder to produce a machine which could be used for general work on the farm.

Upon the removal of the cutter bar the automower stands upon a neat, handy little engine, which may be used either for traction or stationary work. It may be run upon every acre of the farm, or upon the gasoline engine for stationary work. The work, such as corn shelling or husking, grinding, threshing or pumping, has resulted in the adaptation of the mowermotor for this work. It is thought to be a considerable advantage that the engine is mounted on wheels, as it can be moved about at will. Roller and ball bearings minimize the machine's draft. The driver's seat is the usual sulky-mower seat with the steering brake directly in front of it and the power lever at the right hand.

Its inventor, Mr. Steward, who, by the way, has long been connected with the latest devices in farm machinery, talks modestly of his recent work and the possible outcome of it.

"The gasoline engine is the salvation of the farmer for light work," he said. "It can and will be applied to any of the lighter machines but for the heavier work it will not be serviceable because of its limited power. I have already tried the gasoline engine on a corn planter and found it successful, and it can be used on other machines of that nature, but for plowing and work of that class it will not be used. In France, the automobile mower was carefully tested and was conclusively proven to be the greatest success. We have had letters from all over the world asking about and it is my opinion that when it is placed on the market it will have a large sale. The engine is useful for so many things that it will prove an economical investment, while of course if it were simply a mower it would be rather an extravagent investment for the average farmer."

It is safe to say there has been no agricultural machinery brought forward in the past five years which created the universal interest among the farmers that has already been aroused among farmers by the motormower. It is interesting to the automobile fancier as well as to the farmer and to the mechanic, since it is one of the first appliances of the automobile idea to do the work of the country horse. It opens up a field of possibilities along the same lines which builders of farm implements will not be slow to grasp. If what Mr. Steward says is true, and no one would doubt it, the engine will not relieve the farm horses from their drudgery, but will make some of their work lighter, and it will give them a chance to live more like animals, and less like machines than has been their lot during the past century at least.—Toledo Blade.

OREGON LEGISLATURE.

Important Measures Which Have Already Been Introduced.

Senator Steiwer has introduced a bill for re-districting the state into senatorial and representative districts.

Three bills have been introduced in the house providing for a reduction in railroad passenger rates to three cents a mile.

Adjutant-General Gantenbein of the Oregon National Guard, has prepared a bill for the reorganization of the state militia and providing for annual camp, field and cruise encampments every year.

Senator T. H. Johnston has introduced a bill constituting the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer a commission to build a portage railway between The Dalles and Celilo and making an appropriation therefor.

A senate memorial, introduced yesterday by Senator Williamson, and adopted, is of great interest to the people of Eastern Oregon. It protest against any departure from the present laws and conditions in the matter of the supervision and control of the forest reserves, and the senators and representatives of Oregon at Washington are requested to use their utmost endeavors to prevent the same.

Representative Grace renews his efforts to pass a law to punish the poisoning of domestic animals. He had the same bill in the house two years ago. The bill is brief and makes the placing out of poisons where the same is liable to be eaten by horses, cattle, hogs or other domestic animals, a misdemeanor, punishable by a heavy fine or imprisonment. The fine prescribed ranges from $500 to $1000 and the imprisonment from one to five years.

Representative Otto Schumann, of Multnomah, the only tombstone man in the legislature, has introduced a bill to enable tombstone men to collect the value of tombstones from conscienceless relatives of the dead. Tombstones are declared to be personal property by the bill and subject to liens and the enforcement thereof. The bill provides that the tombstones levied upon for the enforcement of a lien may be removed from the cemetery and sold in the same manner as any other personal property.

Representative Allen, of Clatsop, has introduced a bill to preserve [illegible] in Clatsop county as a breeding ground for salmon. The bill provides that no salmon in these streams above tidewater shall be caught by any appliance other than hook. A penalty of a fine ranging from $250 to $1000 or imprisonment from one to six months or both a fine and imprisonment is provided for a violation of the act.
