Interesting Historical Reminescence.

The New York Sun recalls the fact that in April, 1863, Dr. James McBride, a brother of Judge T. A. McBride of this city, was appointed as United States minister to the Hawaiian islands by President Lincoln. Soon after going there he had the American coat of arms placed over the entrance to the American legation.

In 1864 an English man-of-war stopped at Honolulu, having on board two cadets in the English navy, both sons of peers. One of them, Lord Charles Beresford, is now high in the service. This was during the war of the rebellion, when England was rather unfriendly to the United States, and many Englishmen were inclined to think that the United States government was of no special consequence, and was practically destroyed.

One night Lord Charles Beresford and his friend, in order to show their contempt for the United States government, went to the American legation, tore down Dr. McBride's coat-of-arms, and hired a native to row them with it out into the bay where their ship was anchored.

On learning next morning that the coat-of arms was missing, the American minister instituted a search, and soon found the native who had taken it to the ship. A search warrant was procurred and the coat-of-arms brought back by an officer. The commandant of the man-of-war and the English minister at Honolulu immediately called on the American minister and offered an apology in the name of their government for the insult which had been offered. After having made their apology, they stated that they supposed this was satisfactory, and that they had atoned for the offence. The American minister informed them that this was not satisfactory, and that these two young lords, who were officers of the British government, had not only committed a theft, but had by their act, insulted the government represented by him. He further said that, having taken down the coat-of-arms with their own hands, he would not be satisfied until they themselves put it back where they got it. At this the English minister and commandant vehemently protested, saying that such a demand was humilitating and disgraceful and could not be complied with. The American minister, however insisted on a compliance with his demand, saying that the disgrace consisted in the act of stealing the coat-of-arms, and that nothing short of this would be considered reparation for their offence. After considerable diplomatic correspondence and some delay, the English minister agreed to comply with the demand of Dr. McBride, and the latter mentioned the next noon as the time when the coat-of-arms should be replaced.

It was soon noised about Honolula that the two young men were to replace the coat-of-arms the next day at 12 o'clock. When the time came thousands of people from the city and surrounding country were there to witness the ceremony. A photograph of the scene was taken, and it is said that a relative of Minister McBride in Salem now has a copy of this photograph. The young fellow also apologized to Dr. McBride for the insult.

Minister McBride reported the affair to Secretary Seward, who complimented him and demanded an apology from the English government, which was made, and the two young men called home and dismissed from the navy for five years. Lord Charles Beresford has since won distinction in the English army. He commanded the landing force at Alexandria in 1882.

CANBY CULLINGS.

A Bad Accident Several Entertainments and Socials.—Local News.

CANBY, March 22, 1893.—M. Campbell met with a severe accident in C. P. Dix's sawmill last Friday resulting in losing one forefinger and chopping up his thumb on the right hand. Mr. Campbell was sawing out pickets with a picket saw and hardly knew how the affair occurred himself. Dr. Geisy of Aurora dressed the wound and the injured man is getting along nicely.

The necktie party and entertainment given by the Canby I. O. G. T. in Knight's hall last Saturday evening was well attended and everybody enjoyed themselves both old and young. After the neckties were sold the boys took their partners and marched to Evan's hall where an oyster supper was prepared for the occasion. The net proceeds of the entertainment and supper was about $20.

Quite a number of Canby boys attended the grand ball given by the Willamette Trading company. The boys say they would have had a fine time had it not been for an adjoining store catching on fire and burning down. The boys in making an effort to save the building spoiled their Sunday clothes by carrying and throwing water and several of them came home without hats.

W. S. Kellogg has rented the building of Henry Knight and opened up a first class barber shop and candy store.

F. Zollimer who recently opened up a photograph gallery at Canby is doing no business owing to the rainy weather.
