I took the holy book and read to him the seventeenth chapter of Luke, and such passages from other chapters as I thought might comfort him. The women gathered about, crying very softly, and when I closed the book the old man opened his eyes and said:

"That's sorter soothing, and yit it makes me see jist how onery I hev bin. 'I'm g'wine ter hev a scrapin' time with the Lord up thar, stranger. He'un will have a heap o' things laid up agin me that I've dun forgotten long ago, and when I cum for'd to be jedged He'un will say to me:

"'Look, yere, ole Jim, what did ye do this and that fur? Didn't I command ye, and didn't ye walk off by yer own trail and do as ye liked?'

"That's how he'un will say, stranger, and ole Jim will stand thar' with his head down and feeling guilty all over."

"You have done many good deeds in your life, no doubt," I said.

"Jist—a—few—not!—nuff—to count fer shucks. You hain't a preacher or deacon, are ye?"

"No."

"Mebbe ye don't even purfess?"

"I an sorry to say I am not a church member."

"But I want ye to pray with me jist the same, I reckon ye hain't so onery that the Lord won't listen, and your voice kinder comforts me."

After prayer he was quiet for a long time. Two or three people came in and grouped around the bed, but he did not hear them. By and by he opened his eyes, reached out for my hand and said:

"Stranger, I've been thinking it all over. I know I hain't fitten, and I'm not gwine to deny that I'm onery, but I'm goin' up to the Lord and say:

"'Oh, Lord! ole Jim cums yere to own up to all ye've got set down agin him; but jist remember that he can't read nor write, and that he's lived wuss nor a b'ar all his days. He hain't had no mo' chance nor a mewl, and he's been wicked through his ignorance. Gin him a show for hisself and see if he don't cum out on top.'

"That's what I'm gwine to say, stranger, and mebbe he'un will 'low that I'm wuth savin'."

It was long after noon now, and as the old man seemed to fall into a sleep I went out for a short walk. As I returned to the gate his wife met me, wiping her eyes on her apron, and said:

"Stranger, the ole man's dun gone dead!"

And so he was.—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

CARELESS MOTHERS.

Many mothers have permitted their children to die before their eyes when they might have been saved. Any mother who keeps house without a bottle of Acker's English Baby Soother at hand, runs a risk which she may sometime regret. It has saved the lives of thousands of children, and is doing so every year. J. W. Conn, Druggist.
