Inside Baseball.

The catcher flashed an almost imperceptible signal at the first baseman.

The first baseman glanced at the sun.

The pitcher, who had paid no attention to either, then noticed that the third baseman had changed his quid of tobacco to the other cheek.

Whereupon he sent a straight, fast ball right over the plate, and the batter made a two base hit.

It doesn't always work.

DROUTH RESISTANT ALFALFA VARIETIES

Drouth resistance of alfalfas is discussed in bureau of plant industry bulletin No. 169, by J. M. Westgate, agronomist in charge of alfalfa and clover investigations. He says:

In addition to the variegated strains of alfalfa being hardier than corresponding strains of ordinary alfalfa, it has also been observed that the variegated alfalfas are usually somewhat more drouth resistant than the ordinary variety. The apparent corelation between hardiness and drouth never received an entirely satisfactory explanation. The fact that the hardy, drouth-resistant, yellow-flowered alfalfa constitutes a small percentage of the parentage of these variegated strains suggests the origin of these characteristics. It is possible that the smaller number of stomata observed in both the Medicago falcata and the variegated alfalfa may offer a partial explanation of the drouth resistance, but it is difficult to see how this would materially affect the hardiness of strain unless the growth be rendered less succulent during the periods of relative high winter temperatures which sometimes occur. The Grimm alfalfa, sand lucern and Baltic alfalfa have all proved relatively drouth resistant. In certain tests the Grimm alfalfa has proved drouth resistant in North Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, Eastern Colorado, Utah and Eastern Washington. The Baltic alfalfa has proved drouth resistant at Highmore, South Dakota.

The following weights of hay are reported to have been produced without irrigation by Mr. Paris Gibson, of Great Falls, Mont., in 1908. Each plot was one acre in extent and the entire product was weighed. The hay was weighed when in the usual condition for stacking and was not entirely dry.

Canadian alfalfa, (variegated), 7,505 pounds; sand lucern (variegated), 6,425; Turkestan alfalfa, 5,490; Wheeler alfalfa (variegated), 5,490; Nebraska dry land alfalfa, 4,700.

The normal rainfall at Great Falls, Mont., is 14 inches.

Kherson Oats.

The Kherson oat was brought from Russia by Professor F. W. Taylor, of the University of Nebraska, in 1896, and thoroughly tested by the Nebraska station as to its adaptability to the corn belt of the United States, according to Farmers' bulletin 222, U. S. department of agriculture, which quotes from Nebraska station bulletin 82 as follows:

"The climatic condition most favorable to the growth of oats does not usually obtain in the 'corn belt,' and it has been difficult to find a variety of oats well adapted to this region. It is a curious fact that although the great corn-producing states are the largest producers of oats, they are not states in which the yield per acre is high. An oat to produce well in Nebraska, and particularly in the central and western part, should be very early in maturing and should not run to straw." Such a variety was found in the Kherson government in Russia, where the soil and climatic conditions (small and uncertain rainfall) are similar to those of the Great Plains.

The Kherson oat is vigorous, but not a rank grower. The straw is very short, the leaves are broad and expose a laarge surface. The panicles are spreading, i. e., it is not a side oat. The berries are light yellow, small, but numerous, and have a thin hull. It usually weighs well to the bushel and matures very early.

The results of careful tests of the variety in different parts of Nebraska indicate that it is "peculiarly suited to Central and Western Nebraska on account of its habits of growth. Although it usually yields well in Eastern Nebraska, there are other varieties that, in the river counties at least, compare favorably with it. West of that the tests indicate that it is earlier, yields better and weighs heavier than any other variety, with the possible exception of the Texas Red. It has steadily outyielded the Texas Red on the station farm. In the dry season of 1901 it showed remarkable drouth-resisting qualities."

The indications, the bulletin states, are that in introducing the Kherson oats the Nebraska station has rendered a great service to farmers of that large section of our western domain where the rainfall is too scanty or uncertain to insure good crops of ordinary varieties of oats.

Seeding Grains.

A recent bulletin on crops for dry farming, issued by the experiment station of Montana Agricultural college, contains the following regarding seeding grains:

The crops ought to be planted on a moist., well pulverized seed bed. This can best be brought about by plowing in the spring, following immediately with the disc and harrow and cultivating the surface after each rainy period. Early seeding, from August to September 10, is recommended.

New Varieties Promising.

After having discovered the first causes and worked out our methods of soil culture and crop management, our increased development and success will depend upon two kinds of invention. It is probable that our present methods of applying power and our present implements and machines will become obsolete with perfection of mechanical invention. It seems to me, however, that the greatest promise centers in improvement and creation of new forms of domesticated plants.—B. C. Buffum, in dry farming bulletin.

Dry Farming Trees.

An interesting and valuable bulletin (Farm Bulletin 165, Kansas State Agricultural College, March, 1910, Report of State Forester) has just been issued by Prof. Ed. H. Webster, director of the Kansas experiment station, containing a profusely illustrated report from Albert Dickens, state forester, giving results of several years of experimental work in reforestation and establishing of windbreaks. Address Ed H. Webster, dean.

For suggestions as to methods of organizing local dry farming clubs or associations, address the secretary, of the Dry Farming Congress, Hutton building, Spokane, Wash.

A Movable Feast.

She has a biscuit-colored hat,
With plumes of olive green.
Beneath the mushroom crown so flat
A bunch of cherries may be seen.

'Tis perched upon her chestnut hair
Above her shrimp-pink gewn.
And from her little neck so fair
A chain of oyster pearls hangs down

Her coat is made of Persian lamb,
And frogs are all the style.
She doesn't mind at all the "jam,"
Because she's got 'em beat a mile.

And scallops, points of every size,
Go floating round her feet.
When she goes mincing down the street
She looks just good enough to eat!

Gave Himself Away.

"I've made a discovery about Mrs. Blockaway's husband," said Mrs. Kawner. "At some time in his life he was a professional cook."

"How do you know?" asked Mrs. Crossway.

"I happened in there yesterday and found him getting the dinner himself. The girl had left and his wife was sick. He was putting on the table a lot of things he had got at a delicatessen store, and he was doing it properly. If he had been just an ordinary husband, you know, he would have put them all on in the original packages."—Chicago Tribune.

Probably Accidental.

Mrs. Highmus—I was glad to learn from the report the president read last night that our club is still progressing.

Mrs. Upmore—Yes; but I thought she made too long a pause between "still" and "progressing."—Chicago Tribune.

One Woman Has Her Rights.

Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. Rafferty were exchanging ideas across the shabby fence which separated their respective domains. The conversation turned on the subject of woman suffrage. The Philadelphia Record quotes the first lady as saying, "Are ye taking much stock in this attempt that a lot' iv th' wimmin are making to get th' vote f'r us, Mrs. Rafferty?"

"I ain't bothering me head about it," declared Mrs. Rafferty. "I'm satisfied to let Dinny and th' bys do all th' voting for me family. But I do think that a lady shud get a man's pay."

"Well," replied Mrs. Kelly, "all I kin say is, Mrs. Rafferty, that I get one man's pay, or know the reason why, ivery Saturday night."

Short and Sharp.

Urchin—Is this the office of the Bugle? Well, sir, I have come to subscribe for your paper.

Editor (with a genial smile)—Why, sonny, you don't look quite big enough to do such a thing as that.

Urchin—Sir, if a man has to be measured for his subscription at this office I shall subscribe for the Palladium, just across the street. Good day, sir.—Chicago Tribune.

Prisoner—Yes, sir; I'm serving a term in the penitentiary for a crime I never committed. The real criminal is still at large. I tell you, it's pretty tough!

Philanthropic Visitor—It ought not to be. The joke isn't on you; it's on the jury that convicted you and the judge who sentenced you. The trouble with you, my friend, is that you don't catch the humor of the situation.—Chicago Tribune.

Onward and Upward.

"We should keep going onward and upward," said the earnest citizen, "with our eyes fixed on higher things."

"That's what I'm doing," replied the busy person. "I have traded my automobile in as part payment on an aeroplane."—Washington Star.

DEBTOR EVER IN SHACKLES

Good Rule Is to Pay Cash, Keep the Interest, and Debts Cannot Then Accumulate.

He who is in debt seldom smiles.

There are debtors who are certain of their debts and never lose sleep, but there are debtors by the thousands who are forced into the money marts and who emerge with momentary relief and a burden of interest on the heart as well as on the money.

Debt makes many a line across the face and brings age to a hurried autumn.

The man who makes a debt should be sure he can smile after it is made.

When the day of maturity begins to round the home stretch and makes its rapid strides to the line of maturity—when the debtor counts his dollars that he thought would be on hand for his payments and finds that they did not roll in as he expected—when the day of debt payment passes under the wire and the man goes out to pay for the race he seldom goes like the man who has a bankbook in his hand for any emergencies.

Debt hovers over a home as a pending danger. Forgetfulness and worry take the place of bright spirits. Sleep flits around and will not settle to repose on the slumberer.

Like death, the merchant and the farmer who enter the list of debts face the same penalties.

The well-fed man begins to lose his buoyances. His eye is not full of mettle and fire of former days.

The debtor feels guilty. Guilt will not permit a clear countenance. It carries a shadow, however faint.

The man who buys on credit is a debtor.

He is asking the dealer to lend him the money and he pays the interest. The dealer is not in business for his health any more than the real money lender. His interest is frequently larger.

There is a rule that men have found for keeping a strong eye and a clear conscience: Pay cash, keep the interest; debts will then not accumulate.

It's an easy rule to give, but, oh, so hard to follow.—Memphis News-Scimitar.

Police Hoaxed by Clever Thief.

The police of Essen, Germany, are searching anxiously for a man who has hoaxed them in a most flagrant manner. Going with a hand-cart to the central police offices, where about fifty special officers are engaged, the man said he had been sent by the electric supply company to remove the bulbs, and that they would be exchanged for new ones before dusk. He was allowed to take nearly 200 bulbs, and several of the officers actually helped him to remove them. When darkness arrived and the new bulbs were not forthcoming the police rang up the electric light company to remind them of the omission. The reply was startling and left the police "very much in the dark." The company declared they had sent nobody for the bulbs, and knew nothing of the matter; in fact, only a fortnight ago they exchanged the old bulbs for new and more expensive ones. Then it dawned upon the police that they had allowed, and even assisted a bold thief to make a rich haul from under their very noses. Nothing has since been heard of the thief, and just now it is dangerous to speak about electric bulbs in the hearing of an Essen policeman.

Passing of Lord Mayor's Poet.

Lord mayors no longer possess their own city poet, whose duty it was to compose, for an annual stipend of six pounds sterling, the "Triumph," or official poem, in honor of Lord Mayor's day, and similar pageants. There is a large collection of these "Triumphs" in the Guildhall library, worth the attention of historians for their topical allusions. The last of the city laureates was Elkanah Settle, once considered a serious rival to Dryden—by whom he was satarized as "Doeg"—though his poetry, as Wilkes remarked to Dr. Johnson, matched the queer combination of his names. Although a most prolific writer, and a turncoat who could have given points to the Vicar of Bray, this unhappy poetaster did not prosper. He was reduced at last to play "the green dragon" in a Smithfield show, and died a poor brother of the Charterhouse.—London Chronicle.

Belongs to the Children.

"De ol' folks enjoys de Chris'mus," said Brother Dickey, "but der enjoyment is what you might call 'diffunt.' Dey enjoys it kaze de l'il' folks makes 'um. Hits de one season er de year w'en do chilluns own de house fum de garret cl'ar down ter de front do' wid nobody ter disputo de claim; w'en dey makes de days so lively de growlers hatter take ter de woods, an' ez fer de nights—well, dar des ain't no res' 'twel Sleep comes an' coaxes 'um ter quiet wid sweet dreams. To Live Long and Happily.

Make a habit of regular daily relaxation. If you are a woman and head of a home lie down in a darkened room every afternoon, even if only for 20 minutes. If you are a man of affairs don't carry the affairs farther than your home doorsill. Above all, don't allow yourself to become accustomed to fault finding. Don't look on the dark side of life. Cheer up.

Washing Off Suspicion.

Old Hobo—Well, say, w'at are yer washin' yer mits fer—tryin' ter kill de fish in dis brook?

Young Hobo—No, tain't dat; but I ain't goin' ter run no chances o' bein' took fer a "black hander," see?—Boston Herald.

A Budding Financier.

"I've got a boy in my employ who will be a king of finance some day," said a man who has a factory in New York. "A few weeks ago he sold a pair of homing pigeons to a man in Brooklyn. Two days afterward the pigeons appeared at his window. Another Brooklynite bought them, and again the birds came back. The boy has just made a third sale. I am wondering if I had not better get rid of him before he tries to sell me my own factory."

Foxy.

Rita (looking at photo)—Oh, yes, he's handsome enough, but he's an awful bounder. Stella—What did he do? Rita—Didn't I tell you? He made an awful fuss with me one season and then asked me if I thought that dad would object to him as a son-in-law. I said no, I thought not, and he went away and proposed to my sister.—Illustrated Bits.

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful 'Cascarets' for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to 'Cascarets' for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail, and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year." James McGune,

Correcting a Wrong Impression.

"Mrs. Winkler, what I am going to say will surprise you, I have no doubt, but I love your daughter Minerva, and——"

"Mr. Spoonamore, do you think any young man ever stole a march on a watchful mamma? According to my calculations you were due to say two weeks ago to-night what you have said to me just now."

Destroys Hair Germs

Recent discoveries have shown that falling hair is caused by germs at the roots of the hair. Therefore, to stop falling hair, you must first completely destroy these germs. Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly do this. Then leave the rest to nature.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says

Recent discoveries have also proved that dandruff is caused by germs on the scalp. Therefore, to cure dandruff, the first thing to do is to completely destroy these dandruff germs. Here, the same Ayer's Hair Vigor will give the same splendid results.

Trouble Ahead for Percy.

"Miriam," said her mother, "Percy Flaxham is an excellent young man, with desirable family connections, and upon the whole I have no objection to your receiving him on a familiar footing, but you must not allow him to presume upon the fact that you have accepted a present from him."

"I won't, mamma," said the proud young beauty. "If he gets chesty over it I'll give him the clammy flipper the next time he blows in here."—Chicago Tribune.

"Yes."

"What's the matter with your thundering old shebang, anyhow! I've been trying for five minutes to get you!"

"I know it. I thought I'd give you something more to holler about. What's the kick this time?"—Chicago Tribune.

Drives away Flies, Mosquitoes and Gnats. It protects horses and cattle from attacks of insects, enabling them to feed and sleep in peace. It prevents loss of weight and strength from worry caused by attacks of insects, and from the irritation of their bites and stings. There is a satisfaction in the relief it affords domestic animals from the scourge of maddening parasites and flies, besides the profit in returns. Horses do more work on less feed and cows yield more and better milk when relieved from the frenzy incited by constantly fighting a swarm of voracious, insatiable insects.
