IN COLLEGE OF CARDINALS.

The illness of Pope Pius X, which has proved not to be as serious as was first reported, invites attention to the remarkably small membership of the College of Cardinals, the body which selects the occupant of the chair of Peter.

The college now consists of only 50 members. Death has been claiming them faster than the Pope has created them. Only fourteen of the present members of the college have been named by Pope Pius. All the other cardinals helped to elect him, and one, Cardinal Oreglia di Santo Stefano, participated in the proceedings that eventuated in the election of Pope Leo XIII.

Cardinal Gibbons is now fourth in seniority in the sacred college and while all Americans irrespective of religious belief would like to see the venerable Baltimore prelate elected as the first American Pope it is improbable that the honor will come to him.

Cardinal Rampolla, who would have been the present Bishop of Rome but for the intervention of Austria, which exercised a right of veto she had enjoyed for many years, now looms as a formidable candidate. Pope Pius has withdrawn from Austria her ancient veto right, and has thus removed a serious obstacle in the way of Cardinal Rampolla. But this does not necessarily insure his choice. The successor of Pope Pius, when finally chosen, may be some cardinal as little known to the world at large as was Cardinal Sarto when selected as the successor to Pope Leo XIII."

Says the Toledo Blade: "Smoking before meals makes the buccal biscous insensitive to alimentary stimulation and neutralizes the olfactogustory reflex." Now will you stop.

QUESTION NO. 7

What Will be the future of the Moving Picture?

--Answer--

Its friends believe it is destined to become the peoples' university, as it has long since become the peoples' theatre. It will have the best and largest theatres for its homes; it will attract the greatest artists of the world's stage; plays will be supplied by the highest type of playwrights; it will be an invaluable aid in the diffusion of accurate knowledge in all departments of learning, especially in natural history, chemistry, medicine and surgery.

BIG PEACH DEMAND DOESN'T AFFECT PRICE

The demand for peaches is now at its greatest, and indications point to but little change in the price in the immediate future. The sales of peaches during the past sixty hours in this territory have been the greatest on record in this market for a like period.

Demand for peaches is so great in California that, according to leading brokers, it is an exceedingly hard matter to obtain straight cars of freestones from there at this time, but plenty of mixed cars, freestones and clings, are obtainable.

The call for peaches at this time is principally for canning purposes. Since announcement was made that the season for home canning has started, the sales have trebled. It has resulted in the trade cleaning up arrivals with virtually no delay.

The movement of Early Crawfords from local orchards just started during the present week and during the coming six days arrivals are expected to show some increase. However, this is not likely to affect the price to any considerable extent, as shipments from California will decrease as fully as the local supplies will grow larger. The total offerings will probably show little change during the coming week.

Quality of this year's offerings in the peach trade is the best ever known.

CANDIDATE LIST TO BE CURTAILED

So by all means get your name on the "Roll of Honor" before the close of the "double vote" offer or your name will be dropped from the list and you will be "out of the running."

That's all for this time. Take a good rest today and tomorrow at the rising of the sun. Get your brass band ready to make a noise like votes.

A Big Royal Household.

She—But what, George?

He—I'm a darn sight too good to be the son-in-law of your governor.—New York Journal.

United States Known Throughout World as Having Poor Banking System

The Two Defects, Decentralization and Inelasticity of Credit, Should Be Remedied

By EDWIN W. KEMMERER, Professor of Economics and Finance at Cornell University

OUR NATIONAL BANKING SYSTEM HAS TWO GREAT DEFECTS WHICH HAVE RIGHTLY GIVEN IT THE REPUTATION, BOTH IN THIS COUNTRY AND IN EUROPE, OF BEING ONE OF THE MOST UNSCIENTIFIC BANKING SYSTEMS IN THE CIVILIZED WORLD.

These defects are, first, EXTREME DECENTRALIZATION and, second, INELASTICITY OF BANKING CREDIT—both deposits and bank notes. Such defects appear singularly anomalous in a country like the UNITED STATES—a decentralized banking system in the land of trusts and inelastic credit in the country whose ENORMOUS crops make elasticity of credit pre-eminently important.

How different the situation in France or Germany! There we find a great central institution of RECOGNIZED NATIONAL LEADERSHIP, an institution with a high sense of public responsibility, which acts in the interest of ALL and which can effectively control the situation in times of danger by changing a recognized official rate of discount, by extensive operations in foreign exchange and gold bullion and, above all, by the CONFIDENCE it inspires in its power and willingness to transmute prime commercial paper on demand into cash, credit and if need be into gold by the alchemy of rediscount.

Our national bank notes are notoriously inelastic. Viewing them historically, we find that they have shown a tendency to respond more closely to variations in the price of United States bonds than to variations in the demands of business.

CONGRESS AGREES TO ADJOURN TUESDAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Senate adopted the Penrose resolution providing for adjournment of Congress at 3 o'clock Tuesday.

Adjournment of the extra session of Congress at 3 p. m. Tuesday, was agreed upon at a conference today between vice-President Sherman, Senator Penrose and Democratic Leader Underwood of the House of Representatives. The conference resulted in Penrose's decision to introduce a resolution providing for adjournment on that day, Underwood agreeing to make every effort to complete the legislative program of the Democratic House Monday.

President Taft today signed the campaign publicity bill which becomes a law, and the Democratic House, it was decided, will pass the cotton tariff revision bill, send it to the President, and not wait for his certain disapproval.

Formal announcement that Congress could adjourn either Tuesday or Wednesday was made in the House today by Majority Leader Underwood.

Later the Senate and House leaders virtually agreed upon adjournment Tuesday afternoon.

The House ways and means committee decided by strict party vote to report favorably the cotton bill as amended and passed in the Senate and call it up for passage Monday.

MINSTRELS HERE TONIGHT

Richards & Pringle's Famous Troupe To Be at Shively Opera House.

Honest endeavor will always be crowned with success. No doubt this is the reason why Richards & Pringle's Famous Georgia Minstrel troupe which will give an exhibition at Shively opera house this evening has been so long before the public. To make this season better than last, to give the public a better show each year than last, has always been the watchword of the management. Worn-out ideas, shabby wardrobe and questionable acts have never found a place in their program. These methods may succeed for a time, but the American people are too intelligent to tolerate it for long. Not a questionable word, act or song takes place in the performance given by this company. Heads of families often hesitate to take their wives, sisters, wives or children to a minstrel show for this reason, but they need have no fear to take them to the performance given by this company. The program is absolutely clean and refined. This company, which numbers nearly forty people, will be at Shively opera house this evening.
