WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Showers have occurred in Southern Idaho and along the Washington Coast during the last 24 hours, and the weather in the Pacific Coast States is now cloudy and threatening. Light frost was reported Friday morning in Western Washington, Oregon and in California as far south as San Francisco, and in Southern Idaho freezing temperatures occurred, with cloudy weather. The temperatures continue below the normal west of the Rocky Mountains, but it is generally slightly warmer than yesterday. The indications are for generally fair and warmer weather in this district Saturday, except that showers are probable near the coast.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Forecasts made at Portland for the 28 hours ending at midnight Saturday, April 27:

Portland and vicinity—Cloudy and occasionally threatening weather, with slightly higher temperature; winds mostly northerly.

Oregon — Partly cloudy and occasionally threatening, with showers near coast; slightly warmer; northerly winds.

Washington—Generally fair, except showers near coast; warmer; northerly winds.

Idaho—Probably fair and warmer; southerly winds.
