WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Dry weather continues in the states west of the Rocky Mountains, but the temperatures are not unusually high for the season of the year. In Western Oregon and Western Washington, except near the coast, it is from 6 degrees to 14 degrees warmer than yesterday. The indications are for fair weather in this district Monday, except that rain is probable along the Washington coast and North Oregon coast. It will be cooler between the coast and the Cascade Mountains, and slightly warmer east of the latter range.
