THURSDAY - OCTOBER 16

HAS REWARD FOR BASE INGRATITUDE.

The Duke of Orleans, the prince who dares to aspire to a throne in France, has just visited England. He came on business to look after some family property in London, and received not a single invitation either from royalty or aristocracy.

A couple of years ago this young man, whose father and grandfather before him experienced the most generous hospitality from the British court when they were kicked out of France, who was himself born near London and repeatedly received favors at the hands of the aged Queen Victoria, grossly insulted his benefactress by writing for publication a letter addressed to the caricaturist, Wilette, of Paris, applauding his pictorial libels on the aged sovereign.

For that he was denied admittance to Great Britain, although it is said he humbly apologized. Recently he asked King Edward to let him come, and the permission was granted readily enough. But the king will have no personal dealings with him.

WICKED CHICAGO.

According to the American prohibition year book just compiled, one-half the divorce suits in Chicago are traceable to liquor. Statistics are quoted showing that the city has thirty-one miles of saloons, if placed side by side in a row, to eight miles of churches.

This over proportion of saloons strikes one most forcibly when it is considered that the churches are open to the public but a few hours during the week while the saloons, or many of them, do business twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week.

It staggers belief to learn that the consumption of liquor therein amounts to eighty-eight gallons for every man, woman and child of the 1,750,000 population. It is truly a thirsty place.

SAD RESULT OF TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

Two maiden sisters of mature years had been to a temperance lecture. To demonstrate the disastrous effect of alcohol upon life the lecturer had poured a portion of whisky into a glass which contained water and a mass of lively animalculae of different unsightly shapes and sizes. The result of the mixture was that the shoals of ugly-looking fishes were soon bereft of life and were seen floating helplessly in the water.

On the way home, when nearing a saloon, one sister remarked to the other:

"Mary, will you go in and get some whisky?

"Some whisky!" astonishingly remarked the other.

"Yes, dear, for I really can never again drink water with all those horrible things floating about. I would rather drink them dead than alive."

The crews of the big ocean freighters that are doing business between Pacific and Chinese ports are composed of Chinamen. The owners are under bonds to return the Chinamen to their native land in the sum of five hundred dollars each. The peculiar looking chickens aboard a liner now in Portland are not educated up to the use of wheat, paying no attention to a handful of wheat thrown among them. When tried with rice they greedily devoured it.

The Portland Telegram has a picture of a train of German "palace" cars taken from a photograph caught by an American traveler. They look more like our freight train cabooses.

President Mitchell of the United Mineworkers is experiencing some of the annoyances that greatness brings with it. Arriving at the temporary Presidential residence, yesterday he was met with a crowd of twenty or thirty newspaper reporters lined up in hope of getting a precious word or two from the labor leader. He wearily queried, 'Are they always there?"

It seems slow work in this day of rapid communication to just learn that a tidal wave on the west coasts of Mexico and Central America did damage to the extent of several millions of dollars nearly a month ago, September 23.

New York coal dealers hold their stocks at the eighteen-dollar a ton mark, about double the price at which it was sold before the strike. Of course fortunes have been made by coal dealers and speculators.
