That is the comment Mrs. Seymour makes.

COLORS AND MOSQUITOES.

The Hungry Pests Are Said to Have a Dislike For Yellow.

A young girl was talking about mosquitoes. She had spent the summer in a place where they were numerous.

"But I noticed," she said, "that when I wore a yellow dress I didn't get a single bite."

"Did you notice that?" said the young scientist. And then he went on eagerly:

"I am glad you noticed that, for it is a verification of certain experiments that we have made.

"We made these experiments in a gauze tent, and their object was to ascertain the effect on mosquitoes of colors.

"We placed in the tent boxes lined with cloth of different hues, and we found that the little pests crowded frantically into the dark blue box, while the yellow box they would not under any circumstances enter.

"The experiments extended over several weeks. We had in the tent stone vessels for the mosquitoes to breed in. We discovered that next to the dark blue the mosquitoes sought the dark red box. After the dark red came brown, then scarlet, then black, then slate gray, then olive green, then violet, then pearl gray, then white.

"Thus we proved that mosquitoes notice colors, and we formulated two helpful hints for the inhabitants of mosquito ridden districts.

"The first hint is to wear yellow to escape mosquito bites and to use yellow netting for bed canopies and window screens.

"The second hint is to use a blue lined box if you want to trap mosquitoes. With this box in an infested region you could easily catch and destroy thousands of the insects daily."—New York Herald.

A Submarine Signal.

Here is one of the latest wonders of the deep, put there by man. Underneath the Sandy Hook lightship is a big bell, rung by power from the same little engine which toots the foghorn. The bell rings five—one, five—one, five—one, fifty-one, the number of the lightship. An officer on the bridge of an incoming steamship picks up a telephone receiver on the bridge, say eight miles away, and hears the number ringing. He knows what it is and where he is.

The idea is simple. Water transmits sound more than three times as quickly as air. Against the plates of the vessel way down in her hold forward under the water line is a drum which catches and magnifies the sound. A telephone wire does the rest. It matters not how hard a gale may be blowing or whether the foghorn can be heard, the bell is a sure indication. It has been reported off Boston as having been effective at a distance of fourteen miles.—New York Post.

Rose Specialists Well Paid.

An uptown florist who advertised for a rose specialist recently was bewailing his inability to find one.

"It is like advertising for good hotel help in the city when the summer resort season opens," he said. "Everybody worth hiring has a job. The rose season in New York is brief, but it needs an expert to handle them while they last if he is to supply a high priced trade. I mean by that a business in which customers do not hesitate to pay $1 each for fine roses. It is not every grower that can be depended upon to produce heavy headed flowers, radiant and rich in color and with long, strong stems. When a florist finds a man like that he has a prize. Four thousand dollars a year is not at all a big salary for him, and for seven months of that time he has a sinecure. A man like that is paid not so much for what he does as for what he knows."—New York Press.

Wonderful Marksmanship.

It is a proud moment in the life of a British soldier or sailor to be pronounced by the king a credit to the country. Such a compliment was paid to Able Seaman Hollinghurst during his majesty's recent visit to Portsmouth. The honor of royal recognition was due to the remarkable skill of the British sailor in gun practice. With a large square canvas target six feet by eight, in the center of which was a comparatively small bullseye, scarcely larger than a man's hat, placed at a distance of 1,500 yards, Hollinghurst hit it seven times out of ten with six inch shells, making a record that will go down in target practice history.

In addition to the complimentary words pronounced by King Edward, the sailor had a further honor conferred upon him by a personal presentation to his majesty.

Chaffee's Odd Spectacles.

Lieutenant General Chaffee has the most remarkable pair of spectacles in Washington. They are of enormous size, perfectly round and are incased in heavy rims of black tortoise shell. When he puts them on they impart an unusually severe look to his strictly military features. They say about the war department that the general wears the glasses in order to frighten young lieutenants. They are of the pattern worn sometimes by Chinese mandarins, but General Chaffee says he bought them in this country.

A Sugar Cane Cutter.

F. M. Cockrell, Jr., son of ex-Senator Cockrell, is the inventor of a sugar cane cutter that promises to revolutionize the sugar planting industry of the south and at the same time to make its inventor a millionaire. His machine will do the work of more than a hundred men. It cuts, strips and tops the cane and is pronounced by experts who have seen it in operation a wonderful machine that will mean as much to the sugar cane industry as did the cotton gin to the cotton business.

Dr Darrin's Cures

Mrs J. H. Inwall Cured by Dr. Darrin Fifteen Years Ago

G. L. Jennings, of Eugene, writes this paper of his mother-in-law's cure some 15 years ago, thus showing the permanency of Dr. Darrin's cures. He is now located at the Smeede Hotel. This cure will go a long way in favor of the doctor's mode of treatment by electricity and medicines. We join Mr. Jennings in commending Dr. Darrin to the afflicted public. We give his card below:

To the Editor:—Noticing Dr. Darrin's cures in your paper, I wish to state to the public that he cured my wife's mother, Mrs. J. H. Inwall, of Irving, Lane County, Or., some fifteen years ago of stomach trouble and liver complaint. She has never had a return of the trouble since. I am now under the doctor's care myself and have no doubt of the beneficial results. I can be referred to by letter or in person at my furniture and stove store at 493 Willamette street, Eugene, Or.

G. L. JENNINGS.

Henry S. Tilton, the Lucky Man, is Cured of Deafness

To the Editor:—For some time I have been deaf in my left ear. I came to Eugene for jury duty June 19, and found on entering the court house I could not hear the proceedings. I had heard of Dr. Darrin at Hotel Smeede and called on him for his electrical treatment for deafness. He gave me three treatments and cured the deafness, much to my pleasure. Now I can hear the judge of the court and all sounds about me. My postoffice is Pleasant Hill, Oregon.
