The figures published in the Sentinel showing the amount of produce sold and used in the infirmary should be an eye opener to anyone who thinks that the county hospital farm does not deliver the goods. When a farm like the one owned by Coos county can be made to turn off stuff to the amount of $1,400 and more without counting carrots, and other vegetables and fruits, it takes a man who is a farmer to do it. Mr McLeod is a farmer who makes the county hospital farm pay, not only in crops raised but by turning tussock land into the kind that brings crops. Better than that the county boarders have good clean beds, good food and plenty of it. I know for I have slept in one of the beds and eaten the food. In my opinion the bed and food are as good as the average home has. I will venture this is true that Mr. and Mrs. McLeod give the residents of the county hospital more kindness than the big majority of the county boarders gave to themselves before they became residents of the county hospital.

Only Good Handling Will Get Good Eggs

(By C. C. Lamb, O. A. C. Extension Poultry Specialist.)

There are now plenty of ordinary and inferior eggs on the city market. Now is the time to produce eggs of good quality and insist on selling them on a quality basis.

If you have not a market at hand that will buy your eggs and pay you a cash price according to quality, write the O. A. C. Poultry department for information concerning the Oregon Co-operative Egg Circles.

Feed the layers, clean, wholesome food. Don't forget plenty of pure water and green food during these summer days. Provide plenty of nests (with plenty of clean, dry straw in them) to prevent the hens crowding while laying. Results, fewer dirty, cracked and heated eggs.

Gather eggs at least once a day. In hot weather or under muddy conditions twice a day.

Make a practice of cleaning all soiled eggs the same day gathered. The egg shell is porous and bacteria remaining on the egg can penetrate and contaminate it.

In cleaning, do not put the eggs in water. Use a damp cloth to wipe the shell only where there is dirt to remove. When necessary some abrasive substance (as Bon Ami or Sapolio) may be used on the cloth.

Keep eggs in a cool, reasonably dry place. Keep in a temperature of not higher than 50 to 60 degrees. Between 35 and 45 degrees is best.

Do not keep the eggs near any substance having a strong odor; such as kerosene or vegetables.

After the breeding season is over, strive to produce infertile eggs. It will require about 20 days after the males are removed to produce all infertile eggs. The hens will continue to lay as well as when the roosters are present. More money is likely to be realized on infertile eggs because they will not depreciate in case they are subjected to heat while being marketed as a fertile egg will. A sufficient rise in temperature for but a short time will produce germ development in fertile eggs. An infertile egg will retain good quality for 10 days under conditions that will spoil a fertile egg in 48 hours.

It should be understood, however, that a fertile basket behind the kitchen stove, or on the warm pantry shelf; the exposed egg case in the hot sun on the way to town, and the procrastinating method of marketing the egg by passing it along to several different procrastinating middlemen—reduce the value of the eggs.

Owner—"How did you come to puncture the tire?" Chauffeur—"Ran over a milk bottle." Owner—"Didn't you see it in time?" Chauffeur—"No; the kid had it under his coat."—Town Topics.

"In our country, where can we really find the cream of society?" asked Miss Blase.

"In Reno, of course, where society goes through the separator," replied the cynic acridly.—Judge.

Big Business Uses the Telephone

A few weeks ago, a prominent logging supply man was here. He was offered a good order if his people could deliver the goods. In a few minutes he had talked to Tacoma and with the assurances he received, he closed a $16,000 order.

One evening last week, a prominent local lumber operator wished to discuss a matter of policy with his associate. He had an eight minute conversation between Marshfield and Oakland, reached a decision and saved the expense of a trip to California and five days time.

Always THINK before you START: "Can I do it by telephone?" You will save much time and traveling expense, multiplying your efficiency.
