Creameries Getting A Start.

Oregonian Editorial.]
The long-delayed movement for the establishment of creameries in Oregon by the men most interested in promoting the industry, the farmers and local business men, seems at last to have made a genuine stake. For a number of years it has been urged upon the farmers that they should not place their dependence upon crops alone, but should make their farms advance at least a portion of their products to a secondary stage. It has especially been urged that they should feed their crops to sheep, cattle, hogs, horses and poultry, and secure the greater income arising from marketing milk, eggs, poultry and stock. In particular has the subject of dairying on the creamery plan been given attention, both because the wonderful change in the condition of the farms of the Middle West resulting from the general devotion of their farms to dairying proves it to be desirable, but because natural conditions are here superior to those in any other section of the United States. Since the first of January, four new creameries have been started in western Oregon, and the people of half a dozen other localities are giving the matter earnest attention. It is possible to make this business pay the individual farmer only when he is one of many who furnish a regular and sufficient supply of milk the entire year round to a creamery managed skillfully and with the business affairs in competent hands. It has been found that the dividend plan is the most satisfactory, and this is now followed in the organization of new cremeries. It is the result of years of development in the great dairy regions of the east.
This is a matter in which the business men of communities dependent upon agricultural districts are equally interested with the farmers. It is largely owing to their recognition of this that the movement is making such gratifying progress. It guarantees to the creamery a business management, and the farmer feels more confidence in the success of the venture. Strange as it may seem to one not familiar with the extreme conservatism of Oregon farmers, the chief stumbling block to be overcome is the reluctance with which the farmers undertake to keep the number of cattle necessary to supply the milk. It is with extreme difficulty that a pledge of 300 cows can be secured in a territory as large as supplies ten times that number for the the support of creameries in Illinois and Iowa. Of course, as farmers realize the benefits of a steady income from month to month, with a total for the year greater than under the present crop system, the creameries will multiply and the farm mortgages decrease, but that must in the nature of things be a gradual process. It is the present good start that is now so gratifying.

Father Blanchet A Prelate.

Portland Telegram.]
Right Rev. F. X. Blanchet, of this city, who is now traveling in Europe, has been named Monsignor by the Pope, thus being elevated to the rank of a prelate with all its accompanying privileges.
The Apostollic brief naming Rev. Blanchet Apostollic Pretonotary, was received last Monday from Rome by Archbishop Christle, through the Papal delegate, Mgr. Martineili.
This distinguished honor enrolls Father Blanchet among the members of the highest of all colleges of Roman prelates. It has been bestowed on him in recognition of his valuable services rendered to the Catholic Church of Oregon, during his career in the priesthood.
In the early church to Protonotaries, says the Sentinel, was confided the charge of collecting the acts of the martyrs and transmitting them to posterity. Their history, therefore, is bound up with that of the church from the beginning, and this noble origin is still recalled in the duties of present-day Protonotaries to labor in the canonization of saints, and to take note in the reports of the propaganda of all authentic evidence of sanctity which may serve as a base for a future process of canonization. These prelates form the notaries of the church, and to it alone was trusted the valid expression in documentary of the different acts of the administration.
Upon his return to Portland, Mgr. Blanchet, will be presented with the Papal brief. As yet he knows nothing of the honor awaiting him.

Thos. Kay Dies.

Thos. Kay, in former years superintendent of the Ashland Woolen Mills, but of late years at Salem, died at St Vincent's hospital, Portland, Friday, leaving a wife and five children. The funeral took place at Salem. The Oregonian editorially speaks of his death:
In the removal of Thomas Kay, of Salem, death called away a most valuable citizen. The scope of his activities covered various parts of western Oregon, but was always confined to the one particular industry of which he had expert knowledge—the manufacture of woolen goods. For nearly thirty years he was an important figure—in recent years the most important, with one exception—in the development of our local woolen manufacturing industry, the towns of Brownsville, Dallas, Ashland, Waterloo and Salem having experienced the benefits of his practical knowledge and keen-sighted enterprise. It appears to be the fact that, while mills in various places languished and finally failed for want of trained oversight and competent direction, the Kay mills were uniformly successful. His death is, therefore, a real loss to the state.

The show window of H. H. Howard of this city has drawn its share of curious onlookers since Tuesday. The object of interest is two pictures by O. R. Bjerreguard, the artist in wood, of Prospect of this county. One is the picture of the artist's mountain home on Rogue river, and is composed of 900 pieces of variously colored wood cut with a pocket knife and so accurately joined together that it looks like a painting in oil by a master hand. The scene shows his log cabin and farm land, with cattle grazing about, and the surrounding mountains. The other picture is the scene of his boyhood home, "The Denmark Farm," and is composed of 600 pieces of wood Such work entitles Mr. Bjerreguard to a place among the leading artists, high up the ladder of fame.—Medford Free Press.

Direct Legislation Amendment.

Some people want to know what the initiative and referendum means. The constitutional amendment that passed the legislature at its last session explains it and reads as follows:
Resolved by the House, the Senate concurring, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the State of Oregon be and the same hereby is proposed:
Section 1 of article IV of the Constitution of the State of Oregon shall be and hereby is amended to read as follows:
Sec. 1. The legislative authority of the State shall be vested in a legislative assembly consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives but the people reserve to themselves power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution, and to enact or reject the same at the polls, independent of the legislative assembly, and also reserve power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any act of the legislative assembly. The first power reserved by the people is the initative, and not more than eight per cent of the legal voters shall be required to propose any measure by such petition, and every such petition shall include the full text of the measure so proposed initiative petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State not less than four months before election at which they are to be voted upon. The second power is the referendum, and it may be ordered (except as to laws necessary for immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety) either by petition, signed by five per cent of the legal voters, or by the legislative assembly, at other bills enacted. Referendum petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State not more than ninety days after the final adjournment of the session of the legislative assembly which passed the bill on which the referendum is demanded. The veto power of the Govenor shall not extend to measures referred to the people. All elections on measures referred to the people of the state shall be had at the biennial regular general elections, except when the legislative assembly shall order a special election. Any measure referred to the people shall take effect and become the law when it is approved by a majority of the votes cast thereon, and not otherwise. The style of all bills shall be: "Be it enacted by the people of the State of Oregon." This section shall not be construed to deprive any member of the legislative assembly of the right to introduce any measure. The whole number of votes cast for Justice of the Supreme Court at the regular election last preceeding the filing of any petition for the initiative or for the referendum shall be the basis on which the number of legal voters necessary to sign such petition shall be counted. Petitions and order for the initiative and for the referendum shall be filed with the Secretary of State, and in submitting the same to the people he and all other officers shall be guided by the general laws and the act submitting this amendment, until legislation shall be especially provided for
