Today in History

President Richard Nixon's advisor, H.R. Haldeman, tells the president to put pressure on the head of the FBI to "stay the hell out of this [Watergate burglary investigation] business." In essence, Haldeman was telling Nixon to obstruct justice, which is one of the articles Congress threatened to impeach Nixon for in 1974.

Food 4 Thought

"The political lesson of Watergate is this: Never again must America allow an arrogant, elite guard of political adolescents to by-pass the regular party organization and dictate the terms of a national election."

— Gerald Ford, 38th president of the United States

New bike repair hub headed to civic center

By ERIC A. HOWALD
Of the Keizertimes

After almost a year of talking about installing a bike air pump/repair station around the Keizer Civic Center, the new amenity is on the way.

Hersch Sangster, chair of the Keizer Traffic Safety, Bikeways and Pedestrian Committee, updated the committee on rapid progress in a meeting Thursday, June 8.

Sangster said he'd been passing out fliers hoping to drum up financial support for the project whenever he could and crossed paths with Steve Dickey, operations officer for Salem-Keizer Transit. That led to contacting Kiki Dohmman, head of the Cherriots Trip Choice program, which had extra funds to spend before the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

"The station has been ordered and we will be reimbursed for the cost," Sangster said.

Keizer public works staff will install the station near the bike rack at the Keizer Civic Center. Sangster hopes it will be up and operational by August.

In other business:

- Committee members Pat Fisher and Kathy Lincoln took a field trip to Cummings Elementary School to observe traffic problems around the school in hope of finding some way to alleviate potential hazards.

"The problem is that there is more than one problem," Fisher said.

The 450-student school has only one bus route and the rest of the student body walks, bikes or gets dropped off by parents and guardians.

Some of the issues identified included: drivers making U-turns on Delight because of poor connectivity in the streets around the school; parents and guardians parking along most of the neighborhood streets adding to congestion and pedestrian traffic; and volunteer traffic coordinators are not always in sync.

"Solving a problem in one area could push it into another area," Fisher said.

The pair came to the conclusion that the best path forward would be following the Safe Routes to Schools action plan, which would involve assembling a committee of parents, faculty and city staff to come up with a holistic solution.

"You would at least have a chance to hear about all the issues and get a consensus about things that could be done and the inconveniences associated with some of the options," Fisher said.

- Fisher also had an update on the potential for new wayfinding signs along the Salem-Keizer Parkway bike path. Fisher spoke with Dorothy Upton, an engineer with the Oregon Department of Transportation, and determined that sign content as well as locations would need to be approved by ODOT officials.

The next step in the process is sitting down with city staff to determine specifics and then running those by ODOT. After that, there will be a push to find funding. The projects is estimated to cost about $650.

New parking fines approved by council

By ERIC A. HOWALD
Of the Keizertimes

An ordinance approved by the Keizer City Council Monday, June 19, sets new fines for parking violations in city limits in addition to giving Keizer police the authority to tow violators.

The ordinance covering parking violations was revisited in April as city staff searched for tools to curb overflow parking from McNary High School along Newberg Drive North. Residents of the neighborhood have asked the council to remedy the problems repeatedly during the past two years. Parking in front of private driveways during school hours and during big events like football games remains a sore point.

The ordinance clears up some ambiguity in state laws regarding police authority to tow violators, but also sets new minimum, presumptive and maximum fines of $20, $35 and $500, respectively.

In the April draft, the proposed presumptive fine was $100. That did not sit well with Keizer Police Chief John Teague.

"I think $100 presumptive is too much. If we are going to scratch $100 tickets along Ridge Drive during Little League, there's going to be pitchforks," Teague said.

City Attorney Shannon Johnson said he worked with Keizer police and the city's code officer to arrive at the new numbers.

The administrative fine for towing was set at $75.

Setting the fee does not require a public hearing, but there will likely be time set aside for comment at a future meeting when other fees are discussed, Johnson said.

Register for National Night Out

The Keizer Police Department is registering groups for the annual National Night Out event in August.

On Tuesday, Aug. 1, neighbors are encouraged to step out and meet-up, share information, and connect with local public safety personnel.

In partnership with the National Association of Town Watch, the Keizer Police Department will be co-sponsoring the 34th annual National Night Out event citywide from 6 to 9 p.m. Over 38 million people in more than 16,000 communities throughout the country will join forces to promote police-community partnerships, crime, drug and violence prevention, safety, and neighborhood unity.

National Night Out is designed to: heighten crime awareness; generate support and participation in local anti-crime efforts; strengthen neighborhood spirit and police-community relations; and send a message to criminals letting them know neighborhoods are organized and fighting back.

Many neighborhoods will host a variety of special events such as block parties, cook-outs, potlucks, dessert socials and youth activities. Neighborhood Watch block captains are highly encouraged to organize an event as an opportunity to contact their participants, meet new neighbors and update their rosters. All other neighborhoods are also encouraged to participate. To register your gathering, visit www.keizer.org/nno-2017.
