A Checking Account Aids Your Memory

It is not necessary to remember every small bill you pay, when you keep a checking account. Your checks are a record of your business.

Each check has written on its face—the date and amount of the bill paid, the party to whom it was paid. In addition, each check is a receipt for the obligation cancelled.

Don't try to remember the bills you cancell. Pay by check—file your checks for reference. It's the surer method.
